Of making many books there is no end, nor is there likely to be. Some of us are born authors, some attain authorship, and some have authorship thrust upon them. The latter of these is true in the present case. Crewkerne School celebrates the 400th Anniversary of its Foundation on St. James's Day, July 25th, 1899. In view of this festal event I was in April requested by the Anniversary Committee to prepare for the Press a History of the School. Such is the origin of this book. Written in much haste, and in the printer's hands in May, it must of necessity betray many signs of treatment less thorough than the subject merited. To the Warden and Governors of the School I desire to express my obligations for access to the School muniments; and to the following my thanks for valuable helps and suggestions: The Rev. the Head Master, Rev. H. C. Gaye, Vicar of Crewkerne; Rev. Willoughby Allen, M.A., sub-Rector of Exeter College, Oxford; Rev. J. P. Billing, Rector of Seavington; Rev. P. W. Unwin, Second Master of the School; Major Sparks, John Sparks, Esq., W. A. Rixon, Esq., of Alfoxton Park; Mrs. G. P. R. Pulman, Rev. Canon Edmonds, of Exeter; Rev. Canon Wordsworth, Rev. C. S. Ruddle, Rev. A. Lethbridge, Rev. C. T. Hoskins, Rev. J. Stroud, F. J. Tompsett, Esq., S. Warren, Esq., Mr. Fred Stoodley, Junr., and Messrs. Little and Co., of Exeter.

HISTORY OF CREWKERNE SCHOOL.

CHAPTER I.

Four Centuries Ago!

THE 400th Anniversary of the Foundation of Crewkerne School cannot fail to land us mentally for awhile in the reign of King Henry VII. His was an important reign in many ways, but chiefly so in that it was a marked period of transition and gradual revolution in Society, in Literature, and Learning, as well as in national ideas. The long and destructive Wars of the Roses were over,—and none too soon, for therein had the old noble families well nigh exterminated one another. Those of the nobility who had survived the struggle found their feudal independence to be but a shadow of its former greatness: whilst a new nobility, elevated on a qualification of wealth rather than of lineage, was gathering round the King subservient to the royal will.

The discovery, too, of America, if for the present it did little else, at any rate taught the people to think for themselves, and not to trust too implicitly to the learning of the Ancients, whose theology and science might, after all, be just as much benighted as their geography. And with this came the revival of study. Scholars flocked to England from foreign countries, the Greek language attracted more students than ever before, the old methods of teaching were superseded by better methods, and the printing press brought literature within the reach of the ordinary student.

This wave of the "New Learning" was, of course, first felt in the Universities, but it gradually spread over the length and breadth of the land. Schools naturally became a desideratum, but schools were very few and far between. Especially was this dearth of schools experienced in London, for in the year 1447 a petition was presented to Parliament setting forth that "it were expedient that in London there should be a sufficient number of scholes and enfourmers in grammer; and not for the singular avail of two or three persons greuously the hurt the multitude of yong peple of al this land. For wher there is grete nombre of lerners and few teachers, and to noon others, the maistres waxen rid of monie, and the lerners pouerer in counying, as experyence openlie sheweth, agenst all vertue and ordre of well publik." If then, London felt this want of schools, the country towns felt it more, for there were not a dozen foundation schools in England at the close of the 15th century. However, that the wish of the country was attended to in regard to education is shown by the fact that before the 16th century closed there was hardly a town of any considerable size but could boast of its Grammar School.

Turning to Somerset, the town of Crewkerne stood foremost in the matter of education four centuries ago. It possessed the earliest Foundation Free Grammar School in the county, in fact it has been described as¹ one of the most ancient in the kingdom there being not more than "ten anterior to 1499, the date of its foundation."

Crewkerne was a town of considerable importance in those days. It had sprung up in Roman times at the intersection of two Roman roads; later on, under the Anglo-Saxons, it had attained sufficient importance to be chosen with seven other Somerset towns as a place fitted for the establishment of a Royal Mint, and coins of the reigns of Ethelred II, Canute, Harold I, William the Conqueror, and Rufus his son are extant, bearing the stamp of the Crewkerne Mint.

In subsequent times the two obvious causes of the prosperity of Crewkerne were firstly its position and secondly the high nobility and influence of its landlords.

As regards the first of these causes the town stood on the main road from Exeter to Salisbury and London, it was the natural centre of a district thickly dotted with villages possessing some of the best land in the county, besides which, from the lie of the land round Lyme Regis, a great deal of the merchandise from that then considerable seaport had to find its way to Crewkerne, along the ancient Lyme road, before it could reach the most profitable markets.

Then, again, the Lord of the Manor of Crewkerne had always been a nobleman of high position, able to secure for the town such exemptions from taxation and such privileges of markets and fairs as were conducive to the prosperity of the place. A thousand years ago King Alfred was its owner, and he bequeathed it to his youngest son Ethelwald, and this royal ownership actually secured to Crewkerne the privilege of absolute immunity from taxation, which lasted down to the time of Henry II. Soon after the Conquest the Redvers Earls of Devon became lords of this town, whence it descended to the Courtenays, a family of great eminence, and of the kindred of the Royal Families both of England and France. For a time also (1463-1478) Prince George, Duke of Clarence, the ill-fated brother of King Edward IV, was Lord of the Manor and Patron of the Rectory during the attainder of the Earl of Devon. But it seems that the possession of the Manor of Crewkerne carried ill luck with it, for no less than five of the Courtenays Earls of Devon died in battle or on the scaffold, whilst the Duke of Clarence himself, as we remember learning at school, was drowned by his brother's orders in a butt of his favourite Malmsey wine.

But we have traced the history of Crewkerne sufficiently for our purpose, which is to show that it was a place of importance in the time of Henry VII. Its beautiful Parish Church of St Bartholomew was standing in all its mediæval splendour, served by its three co-rectors and its three chantry priests, who probably lived together in the spacious conventual building where now "the Abbey" stands. The population was little under 2,000, for in 1548 it was certified that there were "a thousand partakers of the Lorde's Holy Supper ther." One thing, however, which was wanting in order to raise Crewkerne intellectually, religiously, and morally was a good free school founded upon thoroughly religious principles.

The following chapters are intended to show how this want was supplied.

CHAPTER II.

John de Combe.

COMBE is a tithing lying partly in Crewkerne parish and partly in Wayford. That part of Combe which concerns us in our present research is Combe St. Reigne. This is situated two miles west of Crewkerne, in a valley or "combe" lying deep down below the road leading to Chard. Above it on the right is St. Reigne Hill, which an aged dairyman pronounced to me as "Strain Hill" or "Serraine Hill." This eminence can be seen for miles round. A keeper's cottage is situated there now, but formerly there was a church there dedicated to St. Reigne, and said to contain the bones of that saint.

But who was St. Reigne? the reader will ask. I shall not enter into a lengthy discussion on this point. Much has been written on the subject. A little over four centuries ago the Chronicler, William of Wyrcestre, wrote thus concerning this spot:—"Sancta Regina, id est Reyn, virgo in Ecclesia prope Crokyn in Comitatu Somersetiæ." There he describes St. Reigne, near Crewkerne, as a female saint. However, in another page he says:—"Sanctus Whytus et Sanctus Raynus in Ecclesiâ capellæ super planum prope Crokehorn in Comitatu Somersetiæ secundum relatione Tatershale." This shews that the Chronicler himself was doubtful whether St. Reigne at Combe were a male or female saint. There were two of the name, viz. : St. Reigna, virgin, martyred at Alexia, in Burgundy, in the third century, who was commemorated on September the 7th. The other was

St. Reigne or Reginfred, Bishop of Cologne, who, with St. Whyte or Witta, Bishop of Buraburg, and with St. Boniface, Archbishop, and fifty more were martyred near Utrecht on Whitsun Eve, A.D. 755. These were mostly men of Wessex, sent over there as missionaries, and, in consequence, Archbishop Cuthbert, of Canterbury, ordered their martyrdoms to be annually commemorated throughout the English Church. There can be little doubt the St. Reigne commemorated at Combe was the male saint of the name; and this view is strengthened by the fact that Whitedown fair, close by, has always been held at Whitsuntide, which is also St. Witta's day. Probably these two saints were natives of this part of Wessex, and so their shrines were erected here to keep their memory alive where in life they best were known.

But Combe St. Reigne has another and a greater interest for us. Here was born John de Combe, the Founder of Crewkerne School. His ancestors had for many years been owners of Combe Farm, even right back to the days before the fixity of surnames, and they had adopted the place name as their surname. Hugo de Combe lived there in 1327, and his name occurs in the Subsidy Roll of that year as paying xijd. He witnesses also a deed in the possession of Crewkerne School, dated at Crewkerne the Sunday next after the feast of St. Katharine, 14 Edward III [1340] Possibly he was of the same family as Sir John Combe, Knt., who purchased two-thirds of the manor of Baudrip, co. Somerset, and lands in "Waldepull" and "Wecheford" in the same county, and whose inquisitio post mortem, held "on Thursday after the Holy Trinity day," 46 Edward III [1372], states that he died 19th June, 36 Edward III, leaving a son and heir John Combe, a minor, who married "without the King's permission one Emiline, daughter of Robert Partrich, before he came of age."

Born at Combe St. Reigne in the first quarter of the 15th Century, John de Combe doubtless passed his boyhood after the usual manner in which boys of those days passed theirs. Riding over hill and dale, fishing in the Combe pond or the Rivers Axe and Parret, shooting with crossbow and longbow, following the falconers on their hawking expeditions; doubtless these took up much of his holiday time. Then with what delight did he look forward to the local fairs, amongst the few attractions of those days. He would be sure to be present at St. Bartholomew Fair at Crewkerne, at Lopen Fair, and Whitedown Whitsun Fair, there to expend his treasured savings, and to fill his mind and feast his eyes with the latest novelties or monstrosities of the day. When he saw his Father gird on his armour and ride away to perform the feudal services by which he held his estate, doubtless young John de Combe would make himself a wooden sword and engage in mimic warfare with his playmates. Then on the Sundays and Holydays he would go to Mass in his Parish Church at Crewkerne with his parents, and, perhaps, later in the day walk up the hill to St. Reigne's Chapel, on his Father's land, there to listen once more to the resident Chantry Priest as he recounted to the credulous pilgrims the oft-told story of the life and martyrdom of St. Reigne of old. Or else he would ride over to Haselbury to visit the shrine of the hermit St. Wulfric which everybody, Royalty included, went to see in days of old. Or it might be a Miracle Play performed in the town, which drew the youth and his companions to see the pageantry.

Being naturally averse to following the yeoman life his ancestors had led, and having a taste for study he would be sent to imbibe the rudiments of education from the Priest of St. Reigne, or from one of the Chantry Priests of Crewkerne. Whether he was educated at Winchester or not is a matter of doubt. A certain "John Combe, of Combe, co. Wilts," aged 11, entered as a scholar at Winchester in 1428, but left in the same year to enter some "Secular employment." However, it is certain that our John de Combe obtained a university education. Sent to the University of Oxford (to what college is uncertain), the study of Law would seem to have presented to him the greatest attraction, and after pursuing it attentively he supplicated to the University Authorities for leave to proceed to the degree of Bachelor of Civil Law, 15th December, 1448. Perhaps he hoped one day to succeed the great lawyer of those days, Chief Justice Sir John Hody, who lived at Pillesdon, eight miles from Crewkerne, and whom, of course, he had often seen. But the unsettled state of the country, culminating in the wars of the Roses, blighted his legal prospects, so that he turned his attention to theology and matters ecclesiastical. In due course and after due preparation he received Holy Orders and became Priest. Then by the presentation of George, Duke of Clarence, the King's own brother, who during one of the periodical attainders of the Earls of Devon, had become lord of Crewkerne, he was instituted into the Rectory of St. Bartholomew's Church, Crewkerne, 12th March, 1471/72 as "John Combe, LL.B." This brought him back to the old place once more, and here for a quarter of a century he presided as Rector. His official residence as Rector was the old Parsonage-house, commonly called the "Abbey," which stood at the west of the Churchyard until it was demolished in 1846.¹ From the style of the architecture it is probable that he left his mark on the fabric of the "Abbey," and indulged that taste for building which he displayed so splendidly in the west front of Crewkerne Church and elsewhere.

THE ABBEY, FROM THE WEST.

However it was not to be that John de Combe should end his days as a Country Parson; and so in the year 1484, the Manor of Crewkerne having been restored to the Courtenays, Peter Courtenay, Bishop of Exeter, appointed the Rector to the Treasurership of Exeter Cathedral, and after holding that position two years, Courtenay collated him to the Precentorship of the same Cathedral, 1486, which office he held till his death.

It must not be thought that John de Combe resigned his Rectory of Crewkerne when he obtained preferment at Exeter. He continued for twelve years more to preside over the religious life of his native place, taking no doubt a special interest in the education of the youth of his flock. But his Exeter duties entailed much absence from Crewkerne, and after being Rector for 25 years and feeling the weight of old age, he resigned Crewkerne in 1496, and devoted himself to his Precentorship for the remainder of his life. His residence there was in the Precentor's House in the Close of Exeter Cathedral. He left his mark as a builder there both inside and out, and in the hall of that residence he erected a splendid mantelpiece of carved stone on which his monogram appears. Alas! the Precentor's house has disappeared, and the mantelpiece has seen many vicissitudes, but by the indefatigable and kind research of Canon Edmonds we are enabled to reproduce an excellent photograph of this interesting memorial of our Founder. May the said mantelpiece one day find a home in Crewkerne, and terminate its wanderings beneath the roof of our School. We feel sure that John de Combe would have wished it to be so.

The last few years of his life at Exeter were associated to a certain extent with events of English History. Prince Richard, alias Perkin Warbeck, landed in Cornwall, and marching northward attacked Exeter on the 17th and 18th September, 1497. The citizens, under the Earl of Devon, were successful in resisting his attack, so he marched on to Taunton where he turned coward and deserted his followers, and took Sanctuary at Beaulieu. The rebellion being over, King Henry VII. himself made a progress through the west and reached Exeter 8th October, 1497. He spent three weeks there, pardoning and fining the rebels, and on All Saints' Day he left on his return journey. It is extremely probable that John de Combe entertained some of the nobles of the Court at his house during those three weeks.

Though absent from Crewkerne, John de Combe never forgot his native place. Before his death he carefully prepared his scheme for the Foundation and Government of a "Free School" at Crewkerne. Having succeeded to his ancestral estate at Combe he assigned to Feoffees or Trustees an annual Rent Charge therefrom, assigning to them as well the full possession of his lands in Crewkerne and Merriott, by deed dated 20th January, 14 Henry VII., 1498, and the rents from the whole were to be devoted for ever to the maintenance of a "Free School." At or about the same time one of the numerous chantries attached to Crewkerne Church was put to better use and amalgamated with the said Free School. There is not the least doubt that our Founder, having seen the working of the Exeter Free Grammar School—one of the oldest in England—modelled his own therefrom. In the early part of the year 1499 John de Combe died: a successor was collated to the Precentorship of Exeter Cathedral "vacant by the death of John Combe" April 15th, 1499. No stately tomb marks the spot where he was buried: no lengthy Latin inscription, studded with superlative epithets, recounts the virtues of this faithful Parish Priest, but none the less his name will never perish; it has come down to us and it will go down with honour to the remotest posterity: for in founding Crewkerne School John de Combe 'exegit monumentum cere perennius.'

NOTE ON THE FAMILY OF COMBE.

In 1719 the Rev. John Combe, M.A., on his election to the Mastership of Crewkerne School, is described as "of Combe, who descended from John de Combe ye Founder." This is probably not quite correct, for John de Combe being in Holy Orders was under vows of celibacy, so that unless he was a widower with children before he received Holy Orders he would not have left descendants. There were families of the name of Combe, doubtless kinsmen to the Founder, resident at Holethornes¹ and Hewish, in Crewkerne, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, as is testified by the following extracts from the Crewkerne Parish Register:—

Alice, d. of John Combe the elder, bapd. 6 May, 1559.

Other references to the family are :—

Edward Combe lived at Crewkerne 1646, mentioned in the will of his kinsman, Nicholas Bragg 22 Oct., 1646.

Elias Combe, of Crewkerne, gentleman, lived there 1680, and was the father of the said Rev. John Combe, M.A.,
and of Wm. Combe.

Richard Combe, of Hoarborne, in Crewkerne, was feoffee of the School 1717. He spelt his name Coombe.

In 1785 Mr. Richard Coombs was surgeon and apothecary of Crewkerne.

The will of John Combe, clerk parson of Bettiscombe, co.
Dorset, adjoining Pillesdon, was dated 3 Sep., 1554, and proved 22 Feb., 1554/55. He appoints his brother, William Combe, and his kinsman, Harry Dyvynell, to be his executors, and mentions his brother-in-law, Richard Lawrence, and his sister, Wm Hensbury's wife, but there is nothing to connect him with Crewkerne.

There were Somerset families of the same name three centuries ago at Combe St. Nicholas, North Petheron, Hemmington, and Timsbury, co. Somerset. The latter family entered their pedigree in the Herald's Visitation of Somerset 1623, and obtained from Sir William Seager, Garter King of Arms, a grant of these arms, viz. :—Sable two bars between 6 bees argent 3, 2, and 1. Crest: A demi-lion sable, ducally

CHAPTER III.

The Chantry of the Holy Trinity.

PART of the foundation now represented by Crewkerne Grammar School was originally endowed for purposes different from those to which the revenues eventually succeeded. The foundation is described in the Survey of 1548 as "the ffree schole sometyme callyd the Chantry of the Trynitie there." This leads us to make a little enquiry as to the nature and uses of chantries; why they were so called and when they flourished. Chantries, so called because their express purpose and object of foundation was that masses might be chanted or sung for the souls of the founder and his family, were a mediæval out-growth of the Roman doctrine of purgatory. They multiplied exceedingly in England during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, so that even in St. Paul's Cathedral alone there were no less than forty-seven chantries existing in 1548. Even at Crewkerne there were three if not more. A chantry was generally founded within a cathedral or parish church and had its chapel located in one of the side aisles at the east end of the said aisle, an ancient piscina being all that now generally remains to mark its position, e.g., at the St. Mary Chantry Chapel, now the vestry in Crewkerne Church. Sometimes a specially built side chapel was added to the church over the tomb of the founder and his family, and this was consecrated as a chantry chapel in which masses were said for the departed. A good example of this may be seen in the Wadham Chantry, in Ilminster Church. Sometimes, however, a Chantry was in the churchyard, in a building not attached to the church, still being of course erected over the founder's tomb, or intended tomb, if he were alive. For instance, at Crewkerne there were in 1548 two chantries of St. Mary, one described as "St. Mary in the Church," and the other "St. Mary in the Churchyard." And yet again sometimes a chantry was at a distance from the parish church as was the case with the Beauchamp Chantry in Stoke-sub-Hamdon. However, the intention of the foundation of a chantry was the same in every case, namely, that a daily mass should be said for the health, wealth, and prosperity of the founder and his family during life and for the repose of their souls after death. But this had to be paid for, so the Founder either endowed the chantry with land, tenements, etc., or else settled an annual rent charge issuing for ever out of his own estate for its maintenance. In the former case a Royal license had to be obtained because the Statute of Mortmain (1279) forbade the giving of lands to ecclesiastical or other corporations without the king's consent. Hence, if we can find the date of that license, we can fix the date of the foundation of the Chantry. We have had search made, but have failed to find any such license relating to the Crewkerne Chantry of the Trinity. Nor are there any entries of institutions of chaplains to the said Chantry to be found in the Bishop's registers. Yet this Chantry was endowed with lands at Templelands and elsewhere which descended to the Free School. How are we to explain this? Either it was founded before 1279 or the Statute of Mortmain was evaded by a legal fiction. Probably both are true; for Templelands is in Pillesdon, and according to Dugdale, though he gives no date, but certainly before 1300,¹ Savarus de Pylesdon, lord of Pillesdon, gave lands in Pillesdon to the preceptory of

1. In 1217 Simon, son of Walter de Pillesdon, exchanged all his lands in Crewkerne to Warin de Ralegh for half a Knight's fee in Pillesdon.

Temple Combe. This preceptory was an institution belonging to the Knights Templars, a military religious order founded in 1118 by Baldwin II, King of Jerusalem. Not before 1185 did the Templars establish themselves in England. Temple Combe, of course, takes its name from its former connection with the Knights Templars. Obviously, then, the land which Savarus de Pillesdon gave the Templars was called "Temple land." But how came "Temple land" to the Chantry of the Trinity? In 1340 the order of Knights Templars was finally suppressed throughout England and then their estates became dispersed. The following deeds in the possession of the school throw some light on the history of Templelands from 1375.

By deed dated on the Sunday next after the Feast of the translation of St. Thomas the Martyr, in the 49th year of Edward III, Thomas Hodges, of Pillesdon, enfeoffed Sir Robert Babbe, chaplain (Rector of Pillesdon from 24th February, 13 48/49) and Robert Phelpotes in all the land called "Templeland" with appurtenances in Pillesdon, to uses prescribed "secundum et in formam et effecti cujusdam cartæ nostræ" and which are not repeated in this deed. Again by another deed of enfeoffment dated at Pillesdon the Tuesday before the feast of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, in the 3rd year of King Henry V (1415), Robert Philpot, of Pillesdon, granted to Master John Maior all the lands and tenements called "Tempelland" in Pillesdon to the same uses. Again another deed, dated at Crukerne on the Feast of St. Thomas the Martyr in the 4th year of Henry VI (1425) Master John Sperhauke, John King, of Lytyl Wynsore, and Roger Scoté of Crokestret in the parish of Ilminster, granted to Master John Maior, Thomas Lome, and Johana, his wife, the same "Templelond" in Pillesdon, "which lately," they say, "we have received by the grant or enfeoffment of the aforesaid John Maior to have and to hold according to and in the form and effect of a certain charter of ours." Thus lawyers were just as well able then as now to evade an Act of Parliament, and the Statute of Mortmain was evaded by the founding of what we choose to call, for want of a better word, a "Donative Chantry," which came under the control of no ecclesiastical or secular power. Lands were granted to the selected Chaplain, who handed them on to feoffees and received them back in the shape of payment for masses.

The after History of "Templelands" is simple. Coming into the possession of the Trinity Chantry it was handed on, when the Chantry and Free School were amalgamated, which was at least before 1548; finally it was the property of the Crewkerne School down to the year 1881, since which date it has been represented by the stones, mortar, and timbers of the New School Buildings.¹

1. There is amongst the muniments of the School a deed dated at Crukern the Sunday next after the Feast of St. Catharine, in the 14th year of Edward III (134C), by which Isak Mareschal of Crukern, and Matillis his wife, granted unto William de Chaddelegh, Chaplain, one acre of arable land and an orchard in Crukern, the one lying in "le Quernar," alongside the land of Lucie, late wife of Peter Velo, "and the other lying at Rysteburgh." This was certainly granted for a spiritual purpose, doubtless connected with the Trinity Chantry, but we have not been able to identify the places named with any property which subsequently came into the possession of the School.

CHAPTER IV.

The Free School, sometime called the Chantry of the Holy Trinity.

HOW and when did the Chantry of the Holy Trinity become assimilated with the Free School of Crewkerne? We have been unable to discover the exact date, but it appears that Pillesdon Rectory was generally held with other cures, and we have seen that the Rector of Pillesdon was sometimes the Chantry Chaplain. In the year 1432, September 8th, a certain Thomas Comb was instituted Rector of Pillesdon. It is possible that he was related to John de Combe; he may have been uncle to him. At any rate, when our Founder was Rector of Crewkerne his influence with Royalty at one time and the Courtenays at another to back him up, must have been exceedingly great, and we must not forget that he was a lawyer as well as a cleric, so that if he set his mind on diverting the revenues of a chantry, which was quite superfluous, into a channel more conducive to the benefit of his flock, he had every means at his command to effectively bring influence to bear on the project. It was a donative Chantry; the feoffees were agreeable; the thing was done.

At the same time it is to be noted that Chantry priests often did teach the youth and keep school. Their priestly duties were very light; their daily solitary mass was soon said, and most of the day left clear before them: no parochial visiting, only the daily offices to be gone through. At Enford, in Wilts, Sir John Westeley, Vicar 1472 to 1494, founded a Chantry, endowing it with a flock of one thousand sheep, that number to be maintained for ever, and the increase of the flock to be paid to the Chantry priest as his stipend. In 1547 we read¹ concerning Richard Morres, the incumbent of this Chantry :—"And the said incumbent is a very honest poor man, and hath none other living, but "only this chantry, and a man right able to serve a cure, and "hath always occupied himself in teaching of children there." The fact is, a Chantry priest needed some other occupation to keep him from idleness. The poet Chaucer gives us an idea how common it was, in his days, for a rector to put a curate to serve his benefice, and seek out for himself a rich 'Chantry for souls,' in which to luxuriate in ease, opulence, and idleness. No wonder, then, in 1529, an Act was passed forbidding parsons to receive money for saying masses for the departed. And although this Act did not affect the older endowed chantries, yet it was the thin end of the wedge, and in 1545 another Act was passed which went further, and pro. tem. vested the revenues of all Chantries in the King for life. Then at the King's death, when this Act expired, a more drastic Act in the first year of Edward VI² gave into the King's hands "all colleges, chantries, free "chapels, brotherhoods, fraternities, guylde, free schools," &c., with all their endowments, goods, plate, moveables, &c., power being given to the King to alter the nature, condition, or purpose of such institutions as were not suppressed, and to dispose of the same to better uses, such as the relief of the poor students in the Universities or otherwise. It was by this Act that King Edward VI got all the credit of founding Grammar Schools, &c., throughout the country. In many cases he did nothing of the sort: old endowed schools were by this Act taken into his hands, and Crewkerne School among the number, touched up, put to much expense, and handed back. As for the Chantries, they disappeared altogether, and what became of the money? A few schools were founded, the Hospitals of St. Bartholomew and St. Thomas were endowed, but most of the spoil found its way into the hands of greedy courtiers.

In order to carry out the above mentioned Act a survey of all the said institutions was¹ ordered by Royal Commission, 13 February, 1548, "for the purpose of enquiring into their "revenues, to assign lands applicable to Grammar Schools, to "endow vicars," to assign pensions to priests or poor persons dependent on these dissolved Chantries, &c., to apply rents towards the maintenance of banks and sea walls, &c. The commissioners for Somerset were:—Sir Thos. Speke, Sir Hugh Poulet, Sir John Rogers, Sir John Seyntlow, Sir Thomas Dyer Knights, William Moryce, George Lyne, Robert Keylway, and Robert Metcalf, Esquires, John Hannam and William Hartegyll Gentlemen.² Here is their survey of the lands and tenements belonging to Crewkerne School, A.D. 1547:—

CHAPTER V.

The Founder's Intention and Scheme.

THE original charter or trust deed of John de Combe to the School is missing. It was in existence in 1702, for in that year Mr. Leeves, the schoolmaster, was paid seven shillings and sixpence for "writing an English coppie "of Mr. Combe's originall deed of the School and for his going "to Councillor Waddon for advice about Loscombe Estate." The gap in the history of the School caused by the loss of its foundation deed is indeed great; we have had search made at London, at Exeter, and at Wells Registries with a view to obtaining a copy of this deed, or of the Founder's will. But all to no purpose. We must endeavour then to make the best of the matter and to supply from subsequent documents as much of the original trust deed as we possibly can.

First of all, then, from a note in the Account Book, we can supply the date of the said deed and this is a great point. It was dated "the 20th day of January in the 14th year of King Henry VII." Now the reign of Henry the VII began in August 1485, so that the 20th of January in the first year of that reign would be styled A.D. 14⁸⁵/₈₃. The date of the deed, then, is 20th January, A.D., 14⁹⁸/₉₉. The Founder, therefore, must have executed it only a few weeks before his death, for he died before April 15th, 1499 (the date of the appointment of his successor in the Precentorship).

Having supplied the date of the foundation of Crewkerne School we proceed to collect evidence regarding the contents and purport of the Founder's deed. And here it is to be noted that the Founder did not leave a will for lawyers to explain away and the next heir to evade. No! he was a lawyer himself; so he took care to see his lands and donations handed over to feoffees of his own selection in his own lifetime, for the use of and on behalf of the School he thereby founded. The contents, then, of the deed were evidently these; "Know all men, that I, John de Combe, have delivered over, enfeoffed, demised, and confirmed to N or M, all my lands and tenements, meadows, pastures, rents, reversions, and services, with all their appurtenances in Crewkerne (specified) and Merriott (specified), in the county of Somerset, together with an annual rent charge of xxiijs iiijd issuing out of Combe St. Reigne in the aforesaid county TO HAVE AND TO HOLD to the USE AND INTENTION contained and specified in a certain schedule or charter to this my present writing annexed."

This deed, thus far, would of course be in Latin. We have copied it thus far from the earliest existing enfeoffment deed (also in Latin) handing on the trust to new feoffees (1588). And as there is no reason to believe that the said re-enfeoffment would differ in any way from the original enfeoffment of John de Combe; nor that the said "schedule or charter" would be altered at all in transmission, we therefore proceed to copy exactly the earliest "schedule or charter" which has been preserved. It is on a separate piece of parchment annexed to the enfeoffment deed (it is in English) and reads thus:—

THE ENTENTE AND WILL to this our ffeoffemente annexed ys this that or said ffeoffes shall stande seased of and in all the said landes and tenements and other premysses conteyned in the said ffeoffemente to the use and yntente folowinge. THAT IS TO SAY that the saide feoffees so thereof beyng seased shall receive or suffer to be received all the yssues, rentes, profitts, and advantages comynge and growinge out of the saide landes, tenements and other the premisses by one such person or persons as shall be electe and chosen by the more part of the said feoffees and other sixe of the moste discreeteste men of the Town of Crukerne in the countye of Somerset to the use of the Free Grammer Scoole in Crukerne aforesaid and there to be kepte and taught by one honeste and discreet lerned parson there to be appointed by the said ffeoffees and the sixe Townesmen or the more part of them from tyme to tyme. AND IF hit happen for nonhabilitye or otherwise that the said Free Grammer Scoole by the space of one year and a daye be not kepte within the said towne of Crukerne aforesaid unlesse hit be for cause of sickness or anye other lawfull cause proved by the said ffeoffees and sixe townesmen, THAT THEN the said issues and profits of the said landes and tenements so receaved yearlye shal be by the discrecon of the said ffeoffees and sixe townesmen or the more part of them putt and imployed to the reparacons and amendinge of the said Town and the hieghewayes about the saide Towne as neede shall require from tyme to tyme for ever.

The above intention of the Founder is repeated in all subsequent enfeoffment deeds up to modern times, copied exactly word for word. It is a most interesting document; drawn up by the Founder himself. We can trace in it his shrewd and far seeing personality, his legal training, his keen desire for the continuity of his scheme and foundation, and his concern for the lasting benefit, mentally and bodily, of the inhabitants of his native place.

It was with great reverence and attention to detail that the Founder's wishes were in the days of old carried out to the very letter. Like every other foundation the School has had its ups and downs, but one thing may safely be said, and that is this. Never, during four centuries and more, has Crewkerne been without its Grammar School for the term of a year and a day; never, so far, have the revenues of the school been expended in "amending" the town pump or cracking stones for the Crewkerne "hieghewayses."

A word or two about the scheme of government. Those estimable noblemen and gentlemen who freely give their time and attention towards guiding, regulating, and improving the Grammar School in these days are called 'Governors.' That is quite a modern term in our School. Until 25 years ago they were always called by the term our Founder gave them; they were either "feoffees" or "townsmen." They rather liked those names—maybe, because the Founder gave them to them—and until Parliament interfered none of them would have dreamt of giving the old names up.

There are many interesting entries in the earliest extant account book of the school—which begins in 1609—shewing how the Founder's system of government worked. The feoffees and townsmen elected from among their number, a warden and bailiff, the one to manage the accounts, the other to manage the estates. Feoffees were not to be outsiders as is seen from the following :—

Ffebruary ye 2nd, 1699.

“MEMORANDUM.—It is agreed by the feoffees of the said schoole that noe person whatsoever liveing out of the parish is for ye future to be elected feoffee of the same Schoole, unless he have a considerable Estate in this parish.”

This is smeared with ink, so beneath it is this :—

“The above agreement being partly obliterated by the dislike of some persons, I think itt fitt to transcribe the same for the Benefitt of the School.”

per Wm. MEREFIELD, Warden.

Anno 1712.”

The Feoffees and Townsmen always dined together, in olden times, at the expense of the School, on their annual day of reckoning. This was some little return to them for their freely given time and attention to the interests and welfare of the School. Sometimes, on these occasions, Lord Poulett, who was himself one of the feoffees, would send them some venison from his park at Hinton St. George. Hence we read an item in 1641, “Paid for nine quarts of sacke, and a pinte and four quarts of clarret at the eating of the venison that was given by my Lorde Poulett, 00-13-09.” In 1610 this annual dinner cost the school £3 3s., but in 1692 it had risen to £8 10s. per annum, so that it is evident that some of the outsiders, who had not the honour of being feoffees, protested against this little item, and the result was that the feoffees, always ready to please, entered the following resolution in the minutes of the year 1700, which severely curtailed the expense on this item :—

“October 8th, 1700. MEMORANDUM.—Mr. Roger Cossens, senior, was chosen Warden for ye Schoole by us, ye fifees. Moreover, tis agreed thatt att any meeting for passing any accounts for ye Schoole yt only eighteen pence ordinary and extraordinary shall be expended for each fifee and townsman then present at such meeting.”

Up to 1703 there had been five sets of enfeoffments. The Crewkerne, Merriott, and Combe property were in the hands of one set; Pillesdon of another; Sturminster and Maiden Newton of another; Haselbury of another; and Loscombe, in Netherbury, of another. This was a cumbersome arrangement, so it was ordered as follows:—

“December 4th, 1702. MEMORAND.—At a generall meeting of ye feoffees of ye Free Gramer Schoole of Crewkern it was then mutually agreed by ye said feoffees and townsmen (viz.) that a general infeofment be now made, and that ye Honble. John Lord Poulet, John Bear, Roger Cossins, jun., Sam. Lawrence, Hen. Fowler, John Poole, Peter Stenbridge, Wm. Merefield, Saml. Donne, Elias Coome, and John Hody, jun., be now infeoft, and that for the future no particular enfeofments be made, all former presidents to the contrary notwithstanding.”

In the same year this is entered in the accounts:—

“To Counciller Waddon, for advice about Loscombe and the ffeoffements, £1 2s. 6d.”

So by deed dated 25th February, 1703, all the School Estates were handed over to twenty-three feoffees, and this number was maintained until 1876. The “six most discreetest” townsmen acted with these as before in the management of the School.

By a new scheme of the Charity Commissioners, dated 26th July, 1875, and approved by Her Majesty in Council, 21st July, 1876, the feoffees were abolished, and in their place a governing body was established, consisting of 15 persons, of whom eight are Representative and seven Coöptative Governors. Three of the former are appointed by the Justices of the Peace for the County of Somerset, acting in the petty sessional division in which Crewkerne is situate. One more of the former is appointed by the Governors of the endowed Schools at Ilminster, and the remaining four are chosen by the Parish Vestry of Crewkerne. The Coöptative Governors are appointed by the Representative Governors, and hold office for eight years.

This new Scheme excited a certain amount of opposition at the time when the changes which it brought about were 'in nubibus.' Witness the following protest made at a Crewkerne Vestry Meeting June 10, 1872, and signed by three ratepayers :

“We, the undersigned inhabitants and ratepayers of the town and parish of Crewkerne, viewing with alarm the power acquired by the Crown under the recent Act of Parliament for interfering with the government, income, and intentions of our local institutions, do hereby protest against any act or thing done by the Education Commissioners which may deprive the inhabitants of this town and neighbourhood of having, as from time immemorial, complete and undivided jurisdiction, power, and control over the revenues, appointments, intentions, and endowments of the Crewkerne Grammar School, feeling that the present attempt to interfere with one charity may be only the first step of a march of spoliation, and that sooner or later our almshouses, hospital, and perhaps even our private property may be alienated for the purposes of the State. We, therefore, as inhabitants and ratepayers, claim to have this protest entered among the minutes of this Vestry Meeting.”

Having traced the Founder's scheme of Government down to its extinction, and having described the present Government of the School, it only remains to state how much gratitude is due from Crewkerne to the Feoffees and Governors, both past and present, in preserving and handing down the revenues of the School in their integrity, in adding to the estates by purchase when opportunity afforded, and in freely devoting their time and energy in carrying out the directions of the Founder.

NOTE ON THE SEAL OF CREWKERNE SCHOOL.

The Seal of Crewkerne School, of which we give an illustration, is worthy of more space than we can spare to it. Ten years ago it excited a good deal of correspondence in the Crewkernian as to its origin and meaning. But many years before that Mr. Pulman wrote thus concerning it:—

“Some years ago a seal of which I give an engraving was found appended to an ancient document relating to the School. Some curiosity about this seal was excited at the time of its discovery, and it was at first supposed to represent the ancient arms of the town. The design, however, is clearly not an armorial ensign but simply a device which, together with the legend, appears to have been adopted at an early period. Instances of this nature frequently occur in Seals belonging to Corporations in their corporate capacity to which arms have never been assigned for the institutions intrusted to their care.” To the above remarks the author has appended a foot note as follows:—“I am indebted for a courteous letter from the authorities at the Herald's College to whom the seal in question has been submitted."

Now it is much to be desired that Mr. Pulman had given the date of this "ancient document." No doubt it was one of the earliest school deeds now missing. At any rate we may rest assured that so great an authority as Mr. Pulman would have never described a deed of last century as an "ancient document." I have only found five impressions of this seal on an enfeoffment deed dated 25 February, 3 Anne, 17⁰³/04, and the legend thereon is SIGILLUM CROKORNIENSIS, which, of course, is a grammatical blunder and evidently not the work of any one educated at the School.

But what does this seal represent? That is the question. Various answers have been given to this question, some wise, some unwise. To me it seems that there is only one solution of the matter, and I advance without hesitation the new and original theory that the design represents the castellated monastic abode of the Knights Templars; perhaps their original building, called the Temple, in London. They were a military order, hence the portcullis, the machicolated doorway, &c., and we read that they lived in strongly fortified castles. Also I cannot help thinking that the triple tower in the centre of the design has distinct reference to the Holy Trinity. Read in this manner the School seal is a condensed history of the whole institution, viz. : —Endowment given first to Knights Templars, second to Trinity Chantry, and finally to the School.

In conclusion, I am convinced that the seal has been inherited by the School, together with Templelands Estate, from the Templars, through the Chantry of the Holy Trinity, and is an emblem to be highly valued.

WILLIAM SPARKS, Esq. J.P., D.L.

CHAPTER VI.

Subsequent Benefactors.

IN the year 1547 the School possessed amongst other property lands in Sturminster Marshall and Maiden Newton. The old deeds relating to these are missing, so that we are unable to say whether they were given by a subsequent benefactor to the school, or whether they were originally given to the Trinity Chantry and came thence into the School's possession. They were handed down under a separate enfeoffment until 1703, and in a deed of January, 1577, they are described as "Sometime the property of William Parker, deceased, and which lately we hold by enfeoffment of a certain Walter Ffawne, deceased." At present we have no clue to the date of William Parker and know nothing about him.

We come then to the Rev William Owsley as a subsequent benefactor to the School. He was a member of the Crewkerne and Misterton family of that name. Having been born about 1550, he was educated at Crewkerne School, and having received Holy Orders he became Rector of Shepton Beauchamp, 3rd March, 15⁷⁶/77, on the presentation of James Ayssh and Roger Fforte, of South Petherton. In 1594 he purchased, in conjunction with the Rev. Christopher Minterne, Rector of Cheddington, the Manor of Cheddington, and in 1596 he bought Mr. Minterne's share of the Manor, thus becoming lord of the Manor. He also owned the Manor of Priston, near Bath. He died March, 16²⁹/30. By deed, dated 20 January, 16²⁵/26, he gave the sum of £20 per annum for ever out of his Manor of Priston to be expended in exhibitions of £5 each to assist four scholars annually at the University of Oxford. These were to be nominated by the Rectors of Shepton Beauchamp, Puckington, and Cheddington, and the Vicar of Kingsbury Episcopi, and by Robert Owsley, nephew to the Founder, or by any three of these. In the Owsley account book, in the possession of the Crewkerne School, the following is recorded :—

PERSONS ELIGIBLE TO MR. OWSLEY'S EXHIBITIONS ARE :—

- 1st and principally such as are of the name, alliance, and kindred of blood to Mr. Owsley.
- 2nd. Sons of some who are or have been inhabitants, dwellers, and housekeepers of, or within Misterton, or within the tithing of Misterton, in the parish of Crewkerne, in the county of Somerset.
- 3rd. Sons of some who are or have been inhabitants, etc., in the parish of Shepton Beauchamp, in the county of Somerset.
- 4th. Such as are taken out of Misterton or the school of Shepton aforesaid.

IN DEFAULT of Candidates with either of these qualifications (and not otherwise) are eligible :—

- 5th. All persons of the parish of Crewkerne.
- 6th. All persons of the Free School of the Town of Ilminster, in the county of Somerset.

“The yearly payments of the said several scholars to remain
 “and continue for and during the term of seven years from and “after the said elections, if they so long live and continue in the “said college or hall or place of study in the said University of “Oxford.” Payment was to cease upon preferment or upon the marriage of these Owsley Exhibitioners.

By an amended scheme of the Charity Commissioners, dated 30th November, 1877, these exhibitions were entirely changed from their original purpose and became four annual scholarships of £9 each, tenable by boys at Crewkerne School (vide lists of Owsley Exhibitioners of Scholars in Chapter XIV.)

Another subsequent benefactor to the School was the Right Hon. William Samuel Best, second Lord Wynford, who founded the Wynford Exhibition, by deed dated 12th June, 1847, in memory of his father, The Right Hon. William Draper Best, first Baron Wynford, who was sometime at Crewkerne School. This Exhibition is of the annual value of £25 and is tenable at the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge for four years.

An exhibition of the same value was founded 12th June, 1847, by Thomas Hoskyns, Esq., J.P., Warden of the School. The Hoskyns and Wynford funds were invested in a dwelling house and garden in Abbey Street, Crewkerne. These exhibitions have been an invaluable help to students who have proceeded to the Universities, and the lists in Chapter XIV will shew their recipients.

Another benefaction to the School took the shape of two scholarships founded by the children and grand children of Dr. Penny, tenable at the school for two years, of the value of £8 per annum, called the "Charles Penny Scholarships" in memory of the late Dr. Penny, headmaster. These were founded 3rd May, 1881.

And last, but not least, comes a name which will be honoured by posterity equally with the names of all the aforementioned benefactors. In 1883, Major Sparks, J.P., of Crewkerne, Lord of the Manor of Langton Herring, purchased the old Grammar School and conveyed it upon trust to apply the rents in founding and permanently maintaining two Scholarships, called the Sparks Scholarships for Ancient and Modern History, to be held for one year each at the School, of the annual value of £8.

We must not omit to mention the two other Exhibitions of £20 per annum each, tenable for four years at the University or in professional education. These are called the "Crewkerne School Exhibition," founded 18th August, 1847, and the "John de Combe Exhibition," founded 30th November, 1877, by the Governors of the school. They are open to all boys over 16 who have been two years at the school and are tenable at any institution providing education of a superior grade or instruction in scientific, professional, or technical subjects.

In regard to the subject of Exhibitions to assist scholars at the University, it should be recorded that as early as 1617 Crewkerne Scholars were granted assistance out of the School funds towards the expenses of their University career. Thus, in the accounts for 1617, it is recorded:—"1617 then paid for Tiler for one quarter in Oxford towards his maintenance xs." Again 1618 "Paid to Tyler for one year's maintenance for his sonne in Oxford xls." In 1621 the same Robert Tyler was paid £4 for his maintenance at Oxford. Up to 1683 the feoffees helped their scholars in Oxford in this way. After that date the Owsley Exhibitions assisted most of the Crewkernians who went to Oxford, and now the Hoskyns, Wynford, John de Combe, and Crewkerne School Exhibitions carry on the same work.

There are two other names which are connected with the School, although their owners cannot strictly be called benefactors to the School. Roger Cossins, by will 31st January, 1703, gave an annual sum of £3 12s., payable out of the lands at Furringdons, called Bickmill and Furringdon Lakes ; this sum to be paid to six poor boys for their education, and the recipients to be chosen by the Warden and Feoffees of the Free Grammar School of Crewkerne.

Mrs. Martha Mintern gave three-fourths of the yearly profits of a meadow, late Minterns, at Furringdon, in Crewkerne, one-third of which was to be given towards the education of children of honest and industrious poor people of Crewkerne.

These two Charities are still given to Scholars at the School.

NOTE ON THE FAMILY OF OWSLEY.

The Rev. William Owsley was the son of John Owsley, of Misterton. Here is an abstract of his mother's will :—

"In the Name of God, Amen. I, Eme Owslye, widow, the late wife of John Owslye, of Misterton, husbandman, being sicke in body, make my will, &c." My body to be buried in the churchyard of Crewkerne. To my son, William Owslye the elder, xxs. To my son, William Owslye the yonger, xs. To my daughter Agnes xxs. To my daughter Elizabeth xxs. To Alice Somerset, my servant. Residue to my son John Owslye & executor witnesses Mark Winter, curat, John Partridge, William Sherlocke, John Chubb. Will dated 9 Sep., 1592. Proved at Taunton Archdeaconry Court 25 Sep., 1592. CHAPTER VII.

The School Estates.

SOME account of the School Estates is necessary to the History of the School. As we have already stated, the Founder endowed the School with his lands in Crewkerne and Merriott, with an annual rent of xxiijs. iiij*d.* out of Combe St. Reigne. Of these lands a full account has already been given in the 1548 Survey in Chapter IV. Besides the names there given the following names of their fields, &c., in Crewkerne occur in later times :—Furringdons, Lowergate or Wirepits, Bincombe Nap, Shutlake, Kithills, Curret Hill, Haymore, Underlangdon Bushfield, Blacknil Mead, Boscombefield, Butsclose, Acre Close, Long Strings, Hoarstone, Dragon Close, Holloway's Hays, Crowcastle, Brightwell, Parson's Walk, Portway near Maiden Beechtree, and Linterne, and in Merriott, Niddons and Bulbridge are mentioned. The whole of the Founder's gift appears to have consisted of between forty and fifty acres.

This Crewkerne estate was added to by the purchase from John Trelawny, Esq., 10th October, 1619, of a fourth part of lands called Witherley, in Crewkerne.

It also appears that the School owned several Inns in Crewkerne; The Green Dragon, The Gunn Inn, The Bell Inn, and The White Hart Inn were at various times the property of the School and were let out on lease for lives.

In 1637, 1st June, a moiety of a house in Carter Street (now Abbey Street) was bought for £130 from Hugh Webb, for a Master's house, with one quarter of Long Rodmore Close, at Furrington, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres in the West Common Field, and 20th August, 1675, another house in Carter Street was bought from Robert Hodges, which became the Master's House.

Account of outlying Estates belonging to the School.

TEMPLELANDS IN PILLESDON, Co. DORSET.—Originally (1375) part of the Endowment of the Chantry of the Holy Trinity, then of Chantry and Free School combined, finally of Free School alone. It consisted of a farm house, barn, stable, with garden and orchard adjacent, and with fields called Cowleaze, Broomclose, Backclose, Rushclose, Corner Close, Furzeclose, Beanclose, and two other closes, in all 41 acres. An annual chief rent of 6s. was due out of it to Lord Poulett. The whole was sold to pay for the building of the New School, 1881.

MAIDEN NEWTON, Co. DORSET.—A farm house, with outhouses and garden, and closes, called "Wateringsway, lying next to the great River," Watts Close, Common Field, also lands at Blushmoor Hill, Lang Coomb, Napp, Peach's Lane, Forehills Furland, Sheeplands, Culverlands, Higher Coomb, Webber's Wall, and Townsend. In all a little over 45 acres, with common rights for 100 sheep. Possessed by Chantry and School, before 1548 described as once the property of Wm. Parker. The whole sold in 1876.

STURMINSTER MARSHALL, Co. DORSET.—A small Estate, once the property of the said Wm. Parker. It consisted of "A meadow of one acre in the Common Mead of Sturminster, and "three acres of pasture, inclosed lying near the Church, commonly "called Parkhays, whereon are 12 pollard ashes and 6 maiden "elms" (Survey 1721). It belonged to the Chantry and School before 1548. It was sold 1881 to build the New School.

HASELBURY PLUCKNETT, Co. SOMERSET.—A small Farm, described as “one messuage, containing two dwellings, a barne, “stable, garden, and orchard,” and fields named Ridgeway, Coward’s Bridge, Stitch, alias East Cross Hill, one acre in Maidenhay, Watts Close, Smallbrooks, Gamlin’s Little Mead, and pasture, called the two Great Gamlins. The whole was 20 acres. It was purchased in 1610 with money raised by the reversionary leases of the other School Estates. It passed to Lord Portman 3rd November, 1871, by exchange for other lands.

LOSCOMBE IN NETHERBURY, Co. DORSET.—A farm house, stable, barn, and two little gardens adjacent, and fields called Little Mead, Mower Mead, Market Mead or Mason’s Mead, Broom Close, Spring Plott, Hill Close, two Carrott Closes, Clover Close, Green Close, Mothercombe Bottom, Great Close, and Little Beanplot. In all 36 acres, purchased by the feoffees in 1681 with money received in fines for long leases. Loscombe was sold in 1881 to Mr. Compton.

We conclude this chapter concerning the School Estates with the following:—

CHAPTER VIII.

The Old School.

THE History of the School buildings comes next in order to the History of the Foundation. The one follows naturally as a consequence of the other. The School House is the visible embodiment of the scheme and endowment of the Founder.

We are accustomed in these days to speak of two buildings in Crewkerne under the name of Grammar School—the Old Grammar School and the New Grammar School. It may be new to some to hear that three buildings have, in their time, rejoiced in the name here, and that there was a time when the present Old Grammar School proudly shone forth to the world under the title of the New Grammar School. “Every dog has his day,” and so do buildings which are not Cathedrals.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, and backed up by local tradition, the natural supposition is that the Old Grammar School stands on the ancient site of the Trinity Chantry. It is situated close to the Church, in fact, as one of our illustrations shews, it was virtually in the churchyard in 1846, before the erection of the churchyard railings. And it occupied the same position when Leland visited Crewkerne about 1530, for he tells us:—“the chirch stondeth on the hille and by it is a Grammar Schole endowed with landes for an annual stipend.”

If the Grammar School which Leland saw was the same building as that which existed in 1609, it was a building of two stories, containing several rooms, the names of which occur in the warden's book from time to time. It contained "the schoolhowse chamber," "the middle chamber," "the outer chamber," "the study," "the kitchen," "the stayres," "the kitchen lofte," "the butterie," and "the wood howse." In 1617 a "new chamber" was made over the butterie. The building was of stone, with at least five stone mullioned windows on the ground floor, surmounted, probably, by dormer windows peeping out of a thatched roof. From numerous entries in the warden's book it appears that the kitchen chimney and its vagaries were a perennial source of expenditure in the way of repairs. Some times it fell down, as in 1609, "Item payed unto Thorne the Pavyer to amend the kitchen chimney and for carriage thereof ijs x*d*," at other times it smoked, as in 1611, "Item paid for a stone to cover the chymney and the hellyer to amend some faltes about the house ijs. Paid for an iron barr for the kitchen chimney iijs iiij*d*." The "stayres" were of stone: "1613. Paid for steps, Pavyer, and stones to amend the stayres of the School house vijs. Paid for the sealing at the stayer head for a bench there and for a little deske in the schoole xviijs vj*d*." A rent of four shillings was paid to William Miller for the butterie until 1623, when Mr. Ball, the master, was allowed xxs to rent a room elsewhere. Money was spent in 1619 "to amend the playster in the schoolhowse chamber where Mr. Ball lyeth which was fallen down, and for the amendinge of the Schoole overhadd and to amend the gabell end." Also the same year a "hamdon window" of three lights was made by the "ffreemason," "for the schoolhouse chamber where Mr. Ball lodgeth." And in 1627 "the trundell bedstead in the schoolhowse chamber" was "amended." The school had a garden wall, which always needed repairs, since boys were boys even in those days, and apparently from the same cause the school windows were so often broken that at last the feoffees got tired of repairing them, and stipulated for the master to be responsible therefor. In 1630 it cost 13s. 8d. for "hamdon stone to amend the great well," and the same year Morrice Game made a new school door for 15s. and "two formes for the schollars to sit upon in the Church."

But this old building was getting shaky, and it was not quite large enough, so in 1634 and 1635 the feoffees commenced preparations for entirely rebuilding the School, and for adding a master's house. Timber was cut on the School estate at Haselbury, and the Warden charges his expenses in riding to the forest to Wikewood, near Ilminster, where he bought nine "timber trees" for £14. The cost of hauling these home by "ploughs" of oxen was £5 6s., and the trees were laid in the parsonage barton to mature till wanted. Then, in 1636, the work was begun in earnest. William Meller's barn was hired "to put the stuffe of the old Schoole in." Then the old School was pulled down, and some of the old timber and "liornes" sold to Mr. Hody and others. Walter Knewstubb bought "three of the windows of the olde schoole" for 6s., and James Chubb bought another for 2s. 6d. Mr. Mettford received 1s. 4d. "for writing covenants for the performance of the carpenters' and masons' work." Edward Bettscomb officiated as architect, carpenter, and mason, all in one, for which he was paid £8, in addition to what he earned by piece work and day work both in carpentry and masonry. Thomas Ffisher dug a sawpit for 8d., and he was also paid 2s. "for ridding [i.e. laying bare] a foundation for the school," and Stephen Peppen got 4s. for two days' labour "ridding a foundation for the School porche." Scaffold poles were borrowed; and the early acquired skill of Crewkernians at rope making is shown by the entry, "Paid for a quartren of hempp and the making of yt into ropes for to use about the scaffolds, ijs vjd." Stone was purchased of Nicholas Axe, of Stoke-sub-Hamdon, for £27 6s. 5d., which cost £11 more for carriage, whilst local stone was dug at a "quarr" in Court Barton, and when that gave out stone was obtained from "Warren's Quarr." The Warden found all materials, and paid Edward Betscomb for "316 Pertch of wall," at 2s. 11d. per "pertch." One of the old "hamdon windows" was cleaned and used again, and is still to be seen above the door in our illustration. The stairs were of stone, and the roof was tiled with "Hardington tyle," bought of Richard Coggyn, and with 124 semes of "Hamdon tyle" bought of Jasper Thorne, of Stoke, at 11d. per seam. Richard Coggin laid on the tiles for £3 11s. 3d., using for it "Mr. Merefeild's ladder," which it cost 3d. to return. It appears that this new School of 1636 had seven five-light windows¹ on the ground floor, for which 35 iron barrs cost £3 12s. 2d., and it took 209 lbs of iron to make bars for the higher windows; all these windows were glazed by Robert Somer and by Giles Quarrel, of Bemester, for £5 19s. 8d, and Robert Pike received 18d. for six barrs of iron "for the penacles of the schoole porche." Finally, it occupied two men for eleven days "for the carrienge away ruble oute of the Churchyard." Then all the "schoole stuffe" was brought back from Mr. Meller's barn, and Betscomb made new seats and benches for the boys.

But what had become of the scholars all this while? They were not enjoying a complete holiday, for the Parsonage Hall was hired for them—"paid for the parsonage hall for Mr. Master Ball to keep his school vs," and later on they were taught in the Chancel which appears at that time to have been partitioned off from the rest of the Church. Here they did some damage and the Warden enters in his account the same year "Pd towards mending the Chancell windowes being torne by the meanes of keping of Mr. Ball's Schoole in the sayde place xviiij^d."

We have entered somewhat fully into the building of the "New School" of 1636 because it is substantially the same building as is now called the Old Grammar School. Herein have countless generations of Crewkerne scholars imbibed their education, ere they have gone forth to face the world and win renown, and we doubt not that all now living will remember this inscription which used to stand graven in brass over the old porch:—

"MEMORIÆ SACRUM MRI JOHANNIS COMBII
QUONDAM PRECENTORIS ECCLES. CATHEDRAL
EXON. QUI SCHOLAM HANC GRAMMATICAM
FUNDAVIT ANNO 1499: ET MRI. GUL. OUSLII OLIM
RECTORIS ECCLES. SHEPTON BECHAMLE BENEFI-CENTISSIMI SCHOLAE HUIJUS PATRONI."

"VENITE FILII OBEDITE MIHI TIMOREM DOMINI EGO VOS DOCEBO."

This brass has since been removed to the Scholar's entrance of the new School, where few outsiders ever see it, and its place on the Old School porch has been supplied by the following inscription on the stone, which brings the history of this building up to date:—

"THIS BUILDING USED FROM 1499 UNTIL 1883

"THAT YEAR CONVEYED BY WILLIAM SPARKS,
"THE PURCHASER AND DONOR THEREOF, TO “TRUSTEES UPON TRUST TO APPLY THE RENT IN “FOUNDING AND PERMANENTLY MAINTAINING “ONE OR MORE SCHOLARSHIPS IN CONNECTION “WITH THE CREWKERNE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.”

But the year 1636 was memorable for another addition to the school buildings. It was then that the feoffees bought from Hugh Webb “the fourth part of two cottages in Carter or Abbey Street, and of a close at Furrington, called Long Rod Moore, “and 2½ acres in the West Common Field, and one acre in the “West Field, and four acres in the said field.” This cottage was repaired and rethatched, and is thence onward styled “The “House of Office,” and was used by the Master in lieu of the “butterie ” which had formerly been rented from William Meller. But a far more important purchase took place in 1675. By indenture, dated 20th August, 1675, Lord Poulett and the other feoffees purchased of Robert Hodges for £162 “ a mansion or “ dwellinghouse situated in Cartter Street, Crewkerne, with “garden, court, barne, stable, and outhouses, which premises “ Wm. Hodges, Gent., decd., had purchased from Samuel Owsley “Gent., decd.” This afterwards became the Master’s dwelling-house and was used up to 1881 as a house for the boarders.

In the garden at the side of this house an entirely new Master’s house was built in 1824, and was inhabited by the Head Masters till the removal to the New School, after which, together with the aforementioned boarding house, it was sold October 25th, 1883, to C. W. Haslock, Esq.

CHAPTER IX.

The New School.

WE now leave the Old School and turn to speak of the present buildings of Crewkerne Grammar School.

First of all, how came the change to take place and why were the old buildings given up? This is soon answered. The Old School was too small, and by the 27th clause of the new scheme of the Charity Commissioners which came into force in 1876 it was enacted "that as soon as conveniently may be after the date of the Scheme the Governors either by altering or by adding to the present School buildings or by acquiring or erecting other buildings upon some convenient site in or near Crewkerne shall provide proper School buildings, etc.," for day scholars, boarders, with a house for the Head Master, power being given to sell the School estates to pay expense of building.

As a result of this, an excellent site was obtained just outside the town on Mount Pleasant, and the new School was built. Messrs. Giles and Gough were the architects and Mr. Travena was the contractor. Our illustration shevs the School which they built, at a cost of nearly £10,000. We have no space to enter into minute details concerning it. Suffice to say that the new School is replete with every modern convenience, it has accommodation for 70 boarders, besides 50 or 60 day scholars, there is a Head Master's house attached to it, and besides an excellent chemical laboratory, a fives-court, gymnasium, and swimming bath, there is an eight acre sport field for cricket and football. As for the view obtainable from it, there is none to compare with it at any other School in the county.

Over the front entrance in the spandrels of a handsome Ham stone doorway are shields bearing the arms of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, and the See of Exeter, surmounted by the date A.D. 1499, supporting the Founder's Name—Johannes de Combe—on a shield, and round this is the School motto, "Venite filii obedite mihi, timorem Domini ego vos docebo."

In the schoolroom are two stained windows ; the one given by Major Sparks, D.L., J.P., which portrays the Founder as a priest in eucharistic vestments holding a jewelled missal, and the other erected by the children and grandchildren of the late Dr. Penny, head master, which shews on one side Archbishop Cranmer blessing flaxen-haired schoolboys, whilst a chaplain is unrolling a long architectural plan, and on the other side is a picture of King Edward VI. enthroned, superintending the signing and sealing of the same precious long roll by three officials seated at a trestle table. Over each of these lights is a coat of arms, crest, and motto, the arms in the dexter being those of Penny and in the sinister those of Lewton, and on a brass plate is this inscription :—

NE NOMEN APUD POSTEROS INTEREAT VIRI REVERENDI
CAROLI PENNY S.T.P.

HUJUS SCHOLE MAGISTRI PER SEPTEM ET TRIGINTA ANNOS
HANC FENESTRAM PONI CURAVERUNT
FILII ET FILIÆ.

The new School was opened on January 18th, 1882. It was a day long to be remembered in the Annals of Crewkerne. The town was ablaze with decorations, triumphal arches, texts, mottoes, and banners ; the bells were ringing, and the bands playing. The proceedings began with a service in the Church, with a long procession of the clergy of the neighbourhood who robed at the old School. The Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells preached, his text being Ecclesiastes XII., 13., "Fear God and keep His Commandments," which text was afterwards inscribed in the central dormitory of the School in memory of the sermon. Then, after service, a public meeting, at which the Warden, Viscount Bridport, presided, was held in the schoolroom. Many were the speeches and votes of thanks, the School was duly declared open, and everyone sat down to a sumptuous luncheon in the dining hall, and in two of the dormitories, after which everyone surveyed the new buildings and pronounced them to be in every way satisfactory.

We cannot do better than conclude this chapter with the words of our worthy friend, the Rev. P. W. Unwin, M.A., second master of the School:—

"Without a sea shore, without even a river in its immediate "neighbourhood, it is at first sight hard to realise in what the "attractive beauty of Crewkerne lies. Hill and dale, woodland "and pasture, shady lanes and winding streams, all combine to "make this old West country market town one of the most "picturesque places in this part of England. But its chief "attraction exists in the fact that the town of Crewkerne forms
 "but a part of a magnificent tract of country. From any of the "numerous hills which almost enclose the town an extensive
 "view may be seen on clear days, and this is especially the case
 "with regard to the hill on which the new School buildings "stand. That the site chosen for them is an healthy one has "been proved by the very few cases of illness which have "occurred in the School during the past 19 years. The present
 "boys look the picture of health and lead a thoroughly happy

THE NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

“ life. The accompanying illustration gives a very fair view of “ the School as it is. The playing field, which lies at the top of “ the hill just behind the School, is large and level, forming an “ excellent football ground. From the field may generally be seen
 “ a panorama not easily forgotten. Southward and Eastward the “ view extends for miles, while to the north the eye passes from “ Chiselborough and Ham Hill across the Ilchester marshes to “ the more distant Glastonbury, with its Tor rising from the “ plain, and finally rests upon the Mendip Hills, behind Wells
 “ and Shepton Mallet, which are more than 30 miles away.”

“ Such is the present site of Crewkerne School.”

“ But with natural beauty of position are combined such “ modern advantages as are seldom found in any but the largest “ schools. The School Buildings, the exterior of which is shewn “ in the illustration, contain, in addition to the necessary and “ usual rooms, a carpenter's shop, a private laundry, and spacious “ new chemical laboratories, which have just been erected at a “ cost of over a Thousand Pounds. Mainly owing to the energy
 “ and generosity of the present Head Master the School possesses
 “ a gymnasium, a lawn tennis court, an Eton fives-court, and an “ excellent little swimming bath. A boy who, under these “ circumstances, finds his playtime pass slowly must be very hard “ to please.”

CHAPTER X.

The Wardens, Feoffees, and Townsmen.

THE Official who presided over the feoffees and "six "discreetest townsmen" was called the Warden. He was elected by the feoffees and "townsmen" from among their own number. They generally elected a resident of Crewkerne or its immediate neighbourhood, for the Warden's presence on the spot was an advantage in case of emergency. However some wardens, for instance, Sir Edward Phelipps of Montacute, lived at a distance.

The duties of the Warden appear to have been these; to preside at the meetings, to keep the accounts, to pay the bills, to ride out and inspect the school estates, and in conjunction with the bailiff to see to repairs, to have charge of the school muniments, and to prosecute any legal business which might be necessary for the good of the School. For instance, in 1618, £11 2s. was spent in law business to Mr. Ffry and Mr. Crewkerne, and Mr. Wareham, the Warden, rode "unto the under Sheriffe of Dorset to have Mr. Ffreke taken up with an execution." This was Parson Robt. Ffreke, of Wootton, who had borrowed money upon bond from the School. In 1619 Mr. Robert Stembridge, the Warden, enters in his account, "Pd. for my charges for traveling into Cornewall to Mr. Trelawny's to see the lees of Wytherlye sealed being eight days worke xxxijs and pd. for the hyer of a horse for that tyme viijs." From this it appears that the Wardenship was no sinecure. He had to make himself unpopular sometimes by using legal methods to make those who had borrowed school money on bond pay up. And a great deal of the school money was let out upon bond at an interest of 10 per cent. Some times the town authorities were glad to borrow. There was a serious epidemic in Crewkerne in 1612, and the school was shut up and the master departed as these entries shew: "Lent unto the town in the great extremitie of sickness to help them xij*li* xs" "Paid to a messenger in the tyme of the sickness to goe to Mr. Baule to the end he should come and teach agayne vjd."

The feoffees and townsmen had complete control over the revenues of the School so that they could bestow some money when necessary to charitable objects in the town; witness the following:—

In 1622 it was agreed by the feoffees and townsmen that "the warden should give to the poore of the Towne out of the schoolhouse stock the some of iij*li* in regard of the hardness of the tyme."

In 1627 they lent 46 shillings to the town "to buy 13 letheren buckets for the continuall use of the Towne," and in 1630 they paid 7d. to the town "towards a rate for setting up the cage and pillorie," an instrument of grievous torture then in use, and in the same year they paid much towards the building of a workhouse and prison chamber for the town, lending "the Bridewell man" £10 towards the same works.

But besides objects connected with the town, some of the school money went towards the rival factions in the reign of Charles I.

In 1643 the Civil War was going on between King and Parliament, and the School had to pay 6s. 8d. per month contribution to Parliament for the army. There are many entries in the accounts relating to the presence of soldiers in Crewkerne when the rival armies marched through. One entry in 1643 shews how a soldier stole a lead gutter from the School to make bullets, and only gave it back on payment of sixpence: "Item paid a souldiar to redeame a leddine shute that caryes ye water over ye wall 00-00-06." Other entries speak for themselves, viz. :—"1644. Paid to Ardine upon a rate towards ye Prince's¹ Diet ye first time ye Army was here 00-01-00." "Paid to Constable Curtis for a rate towards ye raising of armes 00-01-04." "Paid 53 weeks pay towards a contribution rate for His Majesty's Service 'at 16d. a week £3-19-00." The next year they paid 24 weeks contribution to Lyme Garrison, £1 12s. 0d. Lyme was anti-Royalist, so that Crewkerne appears to have been Royalist at first, but to have changed round in 1645.

Again, in 1685, in the time of Monmouth's rebellion and the Battle of Sedgemoor, the warden paid "the constable's rate towards the provision for the King's Army," and also "a rate towards Keinsham Bridge" (which had suffered damage in the rebellion), "and other tithing services," which included the cost of carrying out Judge Jefferies' sentences of execution, quartering and boiling in pitch the bodies of ten unfortunate followers of Monmouth, who suffered at Crewkerne.

We have dealt with the Wardens under the New Governing Scheme elsewhere, and all that remains is to give lists of persons who have held the offices of Warden, Feoffee, Townsman, or Governor.

Rev. FREDERIC WELLER, M.A. Headmaster 1883 —

CHAPTER XI.

The Masters of the School.

TO none more than the Masters of the Crewkerne Grammar School are due honour and praise, and yet how sadly have even their names been forgotten. We shall endeavour to gather up from the dust of centuries some facts regarding those who have trained and educated the countless generations of Crewkerne Scholars.

To begin with, it is almost certain that in the early days of the School's existence, if not from its very foundation, the Trinity Chantry Priest held the office of School Master. The duties attached to Chantry and School were so easily workable by one priest, and the Founder's own endowment so inadequate for a School of the size to which Crewkerne School attained before fifty years had elapsed from its foundation, that there would have been great difficulty to find a master at all had not the obvious solution of the financial difficulty been the combination of the two offices of Chantry priest and schoolmaster. One result of this was that it seems to have been an unwritten law that the master should be in Holy Orders. Until the period of the civil war and Commonwealth this was not broken through, and from the appointment of the Rev. John Combe, M.A., 1719, all the Head Masters were in Orders until the Scheme of 1876 dispensed with this requirement. Often the master held a living in addition to mastership, and sometimes a College Fellowship as well. Three were Doctors of Divinity and all were graduates, mostly of Oxford University. Several of them were old Crewkerne Scholars who had obtained Exhibitions from the School to help them at Oxford. As to what was required of a Head Master the following minute from the account book will shew :—

“January the twentyeth Anno Dmi 1719/20. We the Ffeoffees “and Townsmen belonging to the Ffree Gramer School of “Crewkerne in ye County of Somersett.....Appoint
 “and place as school master of ye said School Mr. John Combe, “of Combe (who descended from John de Combe, ye ffounder of “ye said School), being a person of such qualifications as ye will
 “of ye Donor expressly requireth ; hereby directing him to observe “the antient rules of the School and to instruct the schollers in “ye Church Chatechism and to expound thereon, to the end they “may be well grounded in the principles of Religion. And for “his due service in that employ we agree that he shall be paid
 “the usuall Sallery of Thirty-five pounds per annum, and to allow “his Usher Fifteen pounds per annum, and the said Mr. John “Combe is to enjoy all the School houses with the appurts as “his predecessors have enjoyed. In witness whereof we have “hereunto set our hands ye day and year above written.” (Signed by 11 Feoffees and 6 Townsmen.)

These directions are based on Canon 79, in the Canons Ecclesiastical of 1603, which orders :—“All school masters shall teach in English or Latin as the children are able to bear the larger or shorter Catechism heretofore by publick authority set forth.” Canon 78 provides for the episcopal licensing of the curate of any parish, being B.A. or M.A., to teach school in his parish if he be willing ; “provided always that this constitution shall not extend to any parish or chapel in country towns, where there is a publick School founded already, in which case we think it not meet to allow any to teach grammar but only him that is allowed for the said Publick School." That Crewkerne Masters received Episcopal license is shewn by this entry in the accounts 1637 "Pd unto Mr. William Ffreke towards his charge for riding unto Wells to certifie my Ld Bushopp concerning the choise of a Schoolemaster vs."

The first master whose name we know was John Byrde, whose scholars in 1547 numbered from 120 to 140. That he was a man of exceptional powers and attainments is shewn by the passage which we have already cited elsewhere.¹ It is probable that he was the same John Byrde who "supplicated" for B.A. degree at Oxford 17 January, 15³⁰/₃₁, and was admitted thereto 16 February, 15³⁰/₃₁.²

Owing to the loss of all School accounts previous to 1609, we are unable to give the names of the masters who succeeded John Byrde until we come to James Wood, 1609, from which date we have the following complete list of masters.

1 Page 20.

2. Sir Thomas Watson, who died 1523, may have been sometime Trinity Chantry Priest and Schoolmaster here; for he bequeaths legacies to the fraternity of the Trinity at Crewkerne and also to one of his scholars named Austyn. Here is an abstract of his will:—

In the Name of God Amen. I Sir Thomas Watson Priest Curate of Crokehorne, in the diocese of Bath make my will and testament. Dated 22nd December. 1523. Proved 8th February, 1523/24. "I desire to be buried within the midst of the Church of Crokehorne aforesaid, before the image of St. Michael the Archangel." To the mother church of Wells ijs iiijd, to the Church of Crokehorne my best gown and surplus to be prayed for. To the fraternity of the Trinity there my second gowne. To the iij aisles of the Church of Burton on Trent xxvjs viijd. To my father Henry Watson xls. To my brother Peter vjs viijd. To the black and grey friars of Sarum, the friars of Dorchester, and of Evulchester xs severally. To John Fernam, Priest, ijs viijd. To Aristotill Webber ijs iiijd. To each of my godchildren that be alive xijd. To the anchoress of Crokehorne xld and a pair of sheets. To the hermit there ijs iiijd and a pair of sheets. To the university in Oxford to read a lesson in the second book of Decrements vjs. viijd. To Anne Fernam a pair of sheets. To Johan Daye a pair of sheets. To Austyn my scholar my short gowne. Residue to Thomas Lawrence of Crokehorn and he to be executor. Witnesses John Fernam Priest, John Waterson, John Longe, and others.

William Baker, of Crewkerne, in his will, dated 7th September, 1503, bequeaths 6s. 8d. "to the Fraternity of the Trinity at Crewkerne.

It appears that the Rev. James Wood was elected master in 1609 at a stipend of £20 per annum, with use of a furnished lodging beneath the same roof as the School; and the feoffees were so attentive to the comforts of the master and his friends that we read such items as these in the accounts:—

“1610. Item payed for entertaining the schoolemaster’s ffather at his coming to Towne xxxvjs xd.”

“1611. Item bestowed on Mr. Edward Berd for his paynes taking in teachinge the schollers in the schoolemaster’s absence xvjd.”

“1612. Bestowed on a breakfast unto Mr. Baule and his friends when he came to enter the School xxiijs iiijd.”

“1647. Paid for a quart of sack to gratifie Mr. Tompkins.”

It afterwards became the custom for the feoffees to present the master every year with a pair of gloves as a Christmas present; the cost being charged to the School account thus:—

“1674. Ffor a paire of Gloves for Mr. Tratt at Xtmas £00-05s-00d.”

Nothing better illustrates this cordial relationship which existed between feoffees and Masters than the letter of resignation of the late Dr. Penny, in which, under date of 10th Aug, 1875, he writes to W. Sparks, Esq. “In thus severing my connection of upwards of 37 years standing with the governing body of the Crewkerne Grammar School, I may be permitted to express through you to the warden and trustees, collectively and individually, my dutiful sense of the cordial relations which have ever subsisted between them and me, my gratitude for their support upon several critical occasions, and for the readiness with which they have always been willing to entertain my suggestions for the good working of the School.”

We append a list of the Head Masters :—

CHAPTER XII.

Crewkerne Scholars of Old.

SO far, the School boys themselves—the raison d'être of the School— have not received much of our attention, so we proceed to devote a long chapter to this most important adjunct.

First of all, what studies did they pursue in days of old? The very name of the School answers part of the question. The Canons Ecclesiastical ordered that schoolmasters should “teach the Grammar set forth by King Henry VIII and continued in the times of King Edward the Sixth and Queen Elizabeth of noble memory and none other.” Hence the name “Grammar School;” a name which by the bye it is rather nonsense to keep up in these days, when the Grammar of King Henry has ceased to be taught, and especially in regard to Crewkerne School, which was founded years before the said Grammar was concocted.

Besides the Grammar, “the 3 r’s” formed the basis of the curriculum, boys were grounded in the elementary substructure which we have all experienced. The excellent writing in some parts of the Wardens’ account books testifies to the skill to which some scholars attained in the noble art of penmanship. Certainly they could give some of us a long start in these days.

But chiefly the religious character of the education which the School imparted claims our notice. The Head Masters, almost always in Holy Orders, were licensed by the Bishop. Canon 77 says:—“No man shall teach either in publick school or private house but such as shall be allowed by the Bishop of the Diocese.

or Ordinary of the place under his hand and seal being found meet as well for his learning and dexterity in teaching as for sober and honest conversation and also for right understanding God's true religion." And the feoffees duly impressed on the Masters at the time of election to the mastership, that they were "to observe the aughtient rules of the School, and to instruct the Schollers in ye Church Catechism and to expound thereon, to the end they may be well grounded in the principles of Religion."

But the instruction afforded by the School went further than this; scholars who shewed sufficient ability were prepared for the Universities as well as for the legal and medical professions; in fact, a thoroughly good classical education was given to all who desired it. Latin was taught from the foundation of the School, and Greek very shortly after, whilst Hebrew formed one of the subjects taught to the promising senior scholars. But books were very expensive, and as the boys could not afford the most expensive volumes, nor could the master, so the feoffees and other kind friends from time to time assisted, as is shewn by the following items:—

1617 "Item for a Thomatius Dictionaire, for lether and covering the same xijs vjd."

1631 "Paid for a dixionaire for the School, 22s."

In 1634 a new Lexicon cost 18s. 6d. In 1642 Henry Trott was paid 5s. 6d. for binding the Greek Lexicon, and in 1649 it cost 10s. "to new bind it" again. In 1671 Sir Andrew Henley and his brother, Sir Robert Henley, gave two dictionaries and a lexicon to the School for bringing which, and returning a letter of thanks, the accounts shew that 2s. 8d. was paid. In 1721 the study of Hebrew was introduced so that scholars might obtain Hody Hebrew Scholarships at Wadham College, founded by Dr. Hody, who himself was a Crewkerne boy. So we read in the accounts—"1721 It was agreed that one guinea shall be laid out in Montaneu's Hebrew Bible and other books for the use of the Gramer School."

There were no prizes, apparently, as are given every year now, but every year onward from 1655 the feoffees paid prize money to the head boys at the Christmas breaking up. It was a kind of Speech Day, when the head boys "declaymed" as it was called, e.g., "1655 Paid unto 3 schollers at their declamation 3s." The Warden and Bailiff and Feoffees were present at these breaking up entertainments; so we find entries such as this, "Dec. 19, 1723, Paid for the declaimants the Master, Warden, and Usher £1 7s. 0d." After 1725 these Speech Days occurred at Whitsuntide as well as at Christmas breaking up.

There were other awards given to promising scholars. As early as 1616 grants in the form of Exhibitions were made to pupils who proceeded to Oxford. These were instituted before Mr. Owsley founded his Four Exhibitions (1625) of £5 each for the same purpose. The earlier Crewkerne School Exhibitions were of the annual value of £4, and sometimes only £2, and were tenable for seven years, and so were a considerable help to poor scholars. In 1683 these appear to have ceased, probably because their place had been gradually supplied by the Owsley Exhibitions, for though these latter were not strictly attached to this School, yet through failure of outside candidates they became to be generally held by Crewkerne Scholars at Oxford. In 1717 we read of payments "to the Bayliff for horse hire and expenses at several times and places to serve the Electors of Mr. Owsley's Exhibitions (to the use of the Schollers of Crewkerne Parish) with contents of the Donor's deed, 4s."

Another important side of the school life of those days demands our attention. The scholars were mostly day scholars but from the earliest times they all had to attend school on Sundays and Festivals and march to Church, there to sit under proper supervision in their specially appointed aisle. This was in obedience to Canon 79, which directed the masters "And as often as any Sermon shall be upon Holy and Festival Days within the parish where they teach, they shall bring their scholars to the Church where any such sermon shall be made, and there see them quietly and soberly behave themselves, and shall examine them at times convenient after their return, what they have borne away of such sermons. Upon other days and at other times they shall train them up with such sentences of Holy Scripture as shall be most expedient to induce them to all godliness."

It seems that the "Schollers Isle" in the Church had been allotted to the School ever since the days of the Trinity Chantry, and that this was the part of Crewkerne Church which was formerly adorned with the Trinity altar, where the Chantry priest daily performed the duties of his office. In Cromwellian times, however, there was a redistribution of seats in the Church, and the organ having been broken up by the fanatics as a "Popish box of whistles," there is an entry in the School accounts of a payment, "1648, for fitting the organ chamber for the schollers." From that time onward the organ loft was appropriated to the scholars at an annual rental of 2s., and many are the entries in the accounts, of new cushions for the Master's seat in Church; of new matting for the organ loft, and of payments for sweeping the same. In process of time the said loft became dilapidated and it was found necessary to entirely rebuild it. The feoffees raised and found the money for this, and we have preserved the identical list of subscribers. This is the entry in the account book :—

Trees were cut on their own estates and the total cost came to £25 11s. 8d.

Nor was this the only time when the funds of the School were devoted to this gallery. In 1803 the feoffees gave £100 school money to pay "for taking down the present gallery in the Church belonging to the School and rebuilding another gallery in a more convenient place." Now, however, the scholars have been allotted seats no longer in a gallery but in their original place in the Church.

Here are one or two other items of history which shew the feoffees in the light of parental protectors of their youthful scholars. For instance, in 1637 is an entry: "Pd unto Tho. Ffisher for keeping the boyes in order the cock fightings daye vjd." We certainly cannot envy Fisher either on account of his task, or on account of his remuneration. An entry in 1702 reads thus:—"Pd for a warrant for those that Beate ye schoole boys 1s." Evidently a little town and gown affair had taken place and the school boys had come off second best.

That the scholars worked late hours is shewn in 1637, when xviiij*d.* was paid "for 9 candlesticks for the use of the schoole."

We have hitherto said nothing with regard to the cost of education at Crewkerne School in days of old. This must not be passed over. The education afforded by the School was formerly free to boys resident in the town of Crewkerne and six miles round it. Hence the meaning of the term "The Free School of Crewkerne." Of course there were certain methods of procedure before a resident within the six mile radius could become a pupil at the School. He had to obtain a nomination signed by three or four feoffees, then if the School were full he had to wait for a vacancy.

But, of course, non-residents in the locality, who came as boarders, had to pay, and it is recorded that under Dr. Hoadly Ashe there were as many as 80 boarders. We are enabled by means of some diaries, written by Thomas Bartlett, Esq., of Holwell Manor House, in Cranborne, Dorset, to supply some details concerning the cost of education here for boarders about 1739. Mr. Bartlett sent his son to Crewkerne School as a boarder July 2nd, 1739. The Rev. Thomas Hare, M.A., was Head Master, and Mr. Humphreys was Under Master. The School Year was divided into two terms—one extending from February to May, and the other from July to December. The cost of a year's board and schooling was £15; the expense of "carrying my son to Crewkerne School" was 14s., and the indulgent Father enters sundry accounts of pocket money entrusted to the youth's

Master "for his use" (generally 6s. a term) and at breaking up time the old gentleman goes to Crewkerne, pays sundry little bills incurred by his son, and "expended and gave to servants at Crewkerne ye sum of £1 0s. 6d."

The studies of the Crewkerne Scholar of those days were in a considerably advanced condition; for the Father's diaries mention the purchase of such learned books for his son as: "King's Heathen Gods," "Juvenal's Works," "Latin Testament," "Kennett's Roman Antiquities," "Homer's Iliad and Odyssey." &c., whilst the handwriting of the said youth bears excellent testimony to the School.

On the fly leaf of one of the diaries is a note of the extent of the wardrobe of this Crewkerne Scholar of those days, which will bear transcribing in full:—

"Linnen sent with Tom to Crewkerne, January 31, 17³⁹/₄₀

Ten shirts, and one not his own,

Eight necks, viz., six new and two old ones

Six pair of stockings

Four handkerchiefs

One worsthred nightcap

One white waistcoat."

Compare this list with the copious "list of clothes" required by the modern Crewkerne boarder and see how times have changed! But how true to school life the words "one not his own," for who cannot call to mind the annoyance he experienced in his youth when the discovery was made the first day of the holidays, when his box was unpacked, that some articles of apparel therein contained belonged to a schoolfellow half his size, whilst some one else found himself saddled for the six weeks' vacation with garments equally inapplicable to his own person. However, the above list gives us a little insight into the simplicity of school boy attire in those days compared with the modern schoolboy's outfit. No collars and ties, none of the worries and troubles now caused by the wanderings of the responsible shirt button, only the "neck" ruffles, which were entirely independent of studs and buttons, altogether a far more rational dress for a schoolboy! The nightcap is extinct as an article of schoolboy attire, and so perhaps is the white waistcoat, though fashions repeat themselves again and again. But to complete the picture of this Crewkerne Scholar of old we must imagine him in the powdered periwig which his Father bought him for his 18th birthday, and which he wore whilst still at school. "29 July, 1742 Paid for a wig for myself and another for Tom £2 10s. Od." Fancy the awe and reverence of the little boys when the senior scholars wore wigs at eighteen. We have lost, by the abolition of this article of head-dress, that indescribable pleasure which the first donning the wig of manhood gave to our forefathers; it marked an epoch in one's life, a day never to be forgotten or (shall we say) regretted.¹

We shall now proceed to enumerate some of the "old Crewkernians," who went to Oxford during the last three centuries. This list does not pretend to be complete, but it will give some idea of the close connection which existed between Crewkerne School and the Somerset College in Oxford, founded by Nicholas and Dorothy Wadham, A.D. 1613.

CHAPTER XIII.

In Dr. Penny's Time.

“ Be it a weakness, it deserves some praise,
 We love the play-place of our early days ;
 The scene is touching, and the heart is stone
 That feels not at that sight, and feels at none.
 The wall on which we tried our graving skill ;
 The very name we carved subsisting still ;
 The bench on which we sat while deep employed,
 Though mangled, hack'd, and hew'd but not destroyed.

The little ones unbuttoned glowing hot
 Playing our games, and on the very spot ;
 As happy as we once to kneel and draw
 The chalky ring, and knuckle down at taw ;
 To pitch the ball into the grounded hat,
 Or drive it devious with a dext'rous pat ;
 The pleasing spectacle at once excites
 Such recollections of our own delights,
 That viewing it we seem almost t' obtain
 Our innocent sweet simple years again.
 This fond attachment to the well-known place
 Whence first we started into life's long race
 Maintains its hold with such unfailing sway
 We feel it e'en in age and at our latest day.”—COWPER.

IN the “Crewkernian” of June and July, 1889 (a magazine conducted by members of the School), the following interesting account of school life under Dr. Penny appeared above the signature of “OLD BOY.” We have no right to penetrate behind the nom-de-plume, though we should like to give the writer all due praise for such an interesting little sketch of things that used to be, feeling that we cannot pay him a greater compliment than to quote him in extenso. He says:—

“ Do I remember the old Doctor ? Well, yes, rather. I was under his able tuition for six years, and have a lively remembrance of the dear old man. How many years ago was it? Somewhere about 22, I should say. You would like to hear a bit about the Crewkerne Grammar School of that time! I am not much of a chap at spinning a yarn, but just to please you I will rake up my memory and relate a few reminiscences of days at your old School in Dr. Penny's time.

The School at that time was not held in the magnificent pile of buildings of which you boys ought to be, and doubtless are, so justly proud, but in the Old School, or, as it is termed now, "The Parish Room," in Abbey Street. Let us go and have a look at it. You will notice the porch over the entrance with half-a-dozen steps on either side. That was the principal entrance, and outside there we boys used to congregate till the bell rang, and one of the boarders came across with the key, when we all trooped in, just as you do now when Mr. Weller opens the schoolroom door of a morning.

You observe that house over the way, with a lawn in front, now the property of C. W. Haslock, Esq. That used to be the old Doctor's residence, and formed a portion of the School premises. Next to that, where the shrubbery is now, and running close out to the street, with an area and railings abutting on the pavement, was the boarders' residence. A large building it was, four stories high. The boys' entrance was through a long passage on the right-hand side, and behind the house was the boarders' playground and fives courts. Just glance at the extent of the garden, and you will see how far the playground ran back.

Of course, there was no field for cricket and football close to the School, like that in which you boys delight. We used to go to a field in Saunder's Piece Lane. Do you know where that is?

Go to the top of Hinton or Constitution Hill, beyond the Old School, and just as you reach the summit turn up the lane on the left leading to Chard road, and the last field on the right-hand side before crossing into the road is the field whither we boys had to tramp if we wished to play cricket or football.

When I first went to the School, the day boys (or, as they were sometimes called, "Foundation Boys," because part of their fees were paid out of the property of the School), had no playground. They used to use the churchyard path at the back of the School and Church for that purpose. Large triangular boxes used to surround the young trees at that time, but long ago these trees, like the boys, have now grown older, and are now permitted to battle with the world as best they may, without those ugly protections. Many a time, however, we have played "prisoner's base" round those structures. After a while the Governors of the School purchased a piece of land adjoining the Church path. A portion of it is now made into a garden, and, as you will see, the present owner is building a cottage on the remainder. That used to be the day boys' playground.

Have you ever been inside the Old School? If not, I should advise you to go and have a look at it next time you are in Abbey Street, just for the sake of old times. Before, however, you enter, take a glance at the porch, with its three pinnacles. There was a brass formerly let into the porch, inscribed with the motto of the School, "Venite filii obedite mihi timorem Domini ego vos Docebo," together with a lot more Latin which I cannot now remember.

Now you are in the Schoolroom; have a good look round you. Immediately on the right of the door as you enter, with their backs to the old oak panelling, sat the first class. On the left of the door was the Fourth Master's desk (unless I much mistake the same desk is at the School now). Next sat the third class. Exactly opposite, with their backs to the wall, were the second class. Right in front of the door was the stove (we had no steam pipes in those days as you have), and the same old piece of ironwork adorns the floor even now. To the right of the stove was the Third Master's desk, and next, with their backs to the panelling, sat the fourth class. The forms and desks for the fifth and sixth classes were placed longitudinally in the centre of the room. At the top of the room on the left was, and is now, the Second Master's desk. Just notice what a large, roomy old horsebox it is; no wonder it was never removed to the new School. On the steps which surround it have I stood many a time and received a 'wiggling' from a cruel Second Master, of whom many 'Old Boys,' even to this day, have the most lively and painful recollection. At the higher end of the room on the right as you enter the door, perched on two steps, was Dr. Penny's seat and desk. The desk was a box with a flap-down lid, and its one stout, octagon-shaped leg was securely fastened to the floor by iron stays, the screw marks of which you can even now see in the floor. I believe the same desk is now used by your Headmaster. Behind the desk, with its back to the wall, was a high, carved oak chair, in fact the very identical chair that you can now see so worthily filled by Mr. Weller. Here, in this very chair, clothed in cap and gown, with a fat leg on either side of his desk support, facing the boys and the School, sat the Reverend Charles Penny, D.D.

Before, however, I describe him, let us go through the small door to the right of the Doctor's steps. This leads to the classrooms. The lower one, was at times, used by the Governors as a Boardroom, but was generally occupied by the French and Fourth Masters. The room above, was also used as a classroom.

Now to return to the Schoolroom. Time, 7 a.m. The bell rings. The boys troop in to preparation and work till 8.15. The top boy of the first class takes up a board on which is pasted the alphabetical list of names of the boys, and he reads them out loudly. I used to be able to repeat the whole of them from A to Z, but I have not been able to do it for many years now. This was named the "Roll Call," and each boy as his name was called had to answer loudly "Adsum," which, as you know, is Latin for "I am present." Unless he replied he was marked as absent, and had to account therefor to the Doctor later on.

The old Doctor did not always come in at 7 a.m., but generally looked in before we left at 8.15. We all knew his heavy step. His habit was to seize the latch (the very same as now), twist it very rapidly, slash open the door to its widest extent (woe betide the legs of the first class boy who sat too close to the door), take one step into the room, still holding the handle of the door in his hand, and glance rapidly round. If a boy was not attending to his duties he was caught in a moment and had to march up to the formidable steps. Then with a bang the Doctor would close the door and, if all was well, walk to his desk, drop into his chair, and glance once more round. Of course, every boy was most assiduously at work and dare not look up. With a bang the Doctor would place on his desk a book which he invariably carried. I can well remember that book. It was about 12 inches square and two inches thick, strongly bound in leather, and securely fastened with a brass book-lock. Out then would come his keys, the book would then be unlocked and a quill pen taken, and in complete silence the Doctor would write in that mysterious book. What the book was all about and what he wrote therein not a single boy in the School knew, and as far as I know it remains a mystery to this day. Every spare moment that the Doctor had was devoted to this all important wonderful book.

As Dr. Penny is seated at his desk, pen in hand, robed in cap and gown, it will be well to describe him. He was stout, of medium height (to me, as a boy, he appeared very tall), dark, deep set eyes, square, determined looking, clean shaved visage, firm set mouth, and expansive brow. If you wish to see him as I knew him just go and have a look at his portrait in the Board Room at your School.

At 8.15 we were dismissed till 9.30. Again the bell rang and when we were all in the Doctor would step across from his house, go to his desk, and listen while the roll was called. Then, doffing his cap, he would read prayers, after which we proceeded to the usual school routine.

Was the old Doctor strict? I should rather say he was, very strict. He was one of those who believed heartily in the old proverb "Spare the rod and spoil the child." He was a "whipping master," and scarcely a day passed but two or three boys (and sometimes a whole class) received castigation at the Doctor's hands. And he could cane! The poor unfortunate stood on the floor, the Doctor took down the cane, which either rested on his desk or on the ledge of the panelling behind his chair, and with one foot on the top step and one on the second, he would lay on the cane with all his might across the back and shoulders of the delinquent. But the boys got used to it and were wont to pad their backs with copy books, but the old Doctor could recognise the sound sometimes and then would tell them to hold out their hands. He used to think nothing of smashing a cane on a boy's back (just to get the dust out of the cloth) and the boys in their turn thought nothing of splitting his cane by inserting a horsehair in that detestable instrument of torture. But Doctor would not be disappointed, and if a cane gave out, a boy was at once despatched for a new one and the whipping completed to the Doctor's satisfaction.

Of course the old gentleman had peculiar things to try him. I remember once being up at a class (we used to dread going to the Doctor for class although he was very nice at times) we were doing history, and in the course of the lesson the questions turned upon ships. In those days ironclads were somewhat new and he very kindly told us about them. Addressing one boy he said "Tell me what were ships made of before they were made of iron?" Very promptly the intelligent youth replied "Stone, Sir." The Doctor never smiled. He blew out his cheeks as he was wont to do when annoyed and with his right hand he reached down the "persuader" from its resting place behind him. Gazing fixedly at the now frightened boy he said "Stone, eh, sir?"—pushing back his chair as he rose from his seat—"Stone ships, eh?" "Come closer, sir, a little closer. That will do! What is this I have in my hand, eh?" "A cane, sir." Bang—whap—it came down. "And what is a cane made of, sir?" "What"—bang—"is"—bang—"that"—whap—"made"—bang—"of,"—whap—"sir?" There was no reply but a cringing whelp as each blow descended. "Tell me, sir, what is a cane made of?" "Wood, sir" cried the poor unfortunate. "Now what were ships made of?" "Wood, sir." "Then don't you forget it," replied the Doctor, as he placed his cane to rest and resumed his seat.

On another occasion we were up at the class for geography. The questions turned on the various kinds of oil, and the Doctor allowed us to run through the whole category. There was sperm oil, rape oil, castor oil, cod liver oil, olive oil, etc., etc., and each boy racked his brains to think of matters oleaginous. Suddenly one youth, the author of the "Stone Ships" threw up his right hand—he had an idea, a brilliant thought. The old Doctor liked these sudden inspirations, and looking very kindly at the lad, said “Well what is it? Do you know of another kind of oil?” “Yes, sir” replied the anxious youth. “What is it?” enquired the Doctor. “Hair oil, sir.” The puffed out cheeks, the natural motion of the right hand to the fatal ledge, conveyed to the unlucky wight the fact that he had once more blundered and was about to pay the penalty.

Some of the boys were very troublesome, perhaps more so than now, though as to that I would not like to venture too strong an opinion. Geography was invariably a weak point with many lads. The Doctor one day asked a youth what the Bay of Biscay was famous for. The boy in all earnestness replied, “Biscuits, Sir.” I can assure you the storm that ensued was quite worthy of that well known bay, for the Doctor blew, the cane whistled, and the lad contributed no little noise to the hilarity of the occasion.

I hardly know, though, whether that boy deserved a thrashing more than he who when asked what separated England and France innocently replied “the Suez Canal.” The result of such an answer was to draw from the lad’s eyes more water than there was at that time in the canal itself, as it was only in course of construction.

There is an old proverb that, “Where ignorance is bliss ’twere folly to be wise.” Boys, however, were in Dr. Penny’s time (and doubtless are now) ready at all times to make a reply to any query on the off chance that it might be right. They pretended to be wise where their knowledge failed. They replied in haste and repented at—well hardly at their leisure—but later on. So it was with the boy who, when the doctor asked him how they celebrated the Declaration of Independence in America, replied with all the effrontery possible, "By carrying a Deaths-head Moth on the top of a pole." Doubtless the youth was a collector of insects; anyhow the Doctor took good care that the moths did not collect on his clothes for a little while, and the lad's own "Declaration of Independence" was held over sine die.

The Doctor was always kind to new boys. I remember one new comer whom he caught laughing in school. He thought he would just frighten the lad and put him on his best behaviour for the future. "Jenkins," said he, "you are laughing. Come up here, sir, come up here." Up marched the boy. The old Doctor took down the cane. "Do you see this cane, sir?" "Yes, sir," meekly replied the boy, expecting a good thrashing. "You do," said the Doctor, thrusting the cane to the boy's nose. "Then smell it, sir, smell it." "There! now mind you don't taste it." I think the boy did taste it later on, though he was excused that time.

There was one peculiarity the Doctor possessed which I must not overlook; his sense of smelling was really wonderful. He could detect whether a boy had an apple or an orange in his pocket or desk in a moment. He would enter the School with that sudden flinging open of the door to which I have already alluded, and standing bolt upright with the handle in his hand would give three or four loud, prolonged sniffs, drawing his breath in through his nostrils with the utmost power of his lungs, and then blowing out his cheeks in his wonted manner. He could smell apples afar off. "Who's got apples?" he would thunder. Not a boy would reply. "It is in this direction" he would say, still sniffing and walking invariably towards the unfortunate possessor of the luscious fruit. "Tompkins" (he had spotted the culprit) "have you any apples?" "Yes, sir." "Then bring them out." Out would come a fine rosy tempting looking apple. "Place it on the desk, sir, dear me, a nice fine one, a regular beauty, it really looks worth 50 lines, don't you think so? Have you any more?" "One more, sir." "Oh, then bring it out." Out it would come. "That's a fine one too—almost as large as the other! I really think the two are worth 100 lines. Any more?" "One more, sir." "Indeed, then let us see it. I am beginning to think we shall have enough to make a pie. That's a large one too—really larger than either of the others. I think I must say 100 lines for that one. Any more?" "No, sir." "Are you quite sure now? look round in your desk." The boy would look and reply "No, sir, those are all." Then the old Doctor would pick up the first and say, "Very good—v-e-r-y g-o-o-d. Now you will just write me out and bring me to-morrow morning 200 lines of 'I must not eat apples in School,' and next time, sir, I find you bring apples here remember you will not be let off with an imposition." The boy would never see his apples again, and would be sure to be cautious not to transgress in that direction until the next apple season.

At the Old School in Dr. Penny's time we had no swimming bath. Although we could not boast of such a splendid bathing place as you boys have now, we were not altogether without the means of attaining that most indispensable accomplishment of every boys' education—swimming. We were permitted to bathe in the River Parret by H. W. Hoskins, Esq., one of the Governors of the School. The bathing place was at Broomcraft. Do you know where that is? No? Then just take a stroll with me and I will shew you.

You know Easthams Lane, of course? It is the first lane on the left as you descend the hill from the School. Go straight down this lane, under the bridge till you come to a style leading across a field, follow on over the next gate across a field to the small plantation, through the style up the hill to the next gate, jump over and there you are. Below are two small rivers, the Parrett and the Mill Stream. Now cross the first wooden bridge, turn sharp to the right, follow the path until you are past the copse on the left. Here used to be a small bridge. If it is there now cross over and follow the stream till you come to the weir or waterfall. Go on to the bend in the river; notice it takes a sharp turn to the right. Here was our bathing place from this point to the bend of the river a little higher up, where it turns abruptly to the left. What do you think of it? Not much? Still it was better than no bathing place at all, although when there were twenty or thirty boys in the brook it was rather more than water we were bathing in—it almost amounted to mud. One mouthful of that discoloured liquid was quite sufficient to satisfy any craving for more.

The deepest point is at the higher bend. A tree used to stand on the edge of the bank and the diving place was from one of its branches into the hole. A fellow had to make a sharp dive with a rapid rise or his hands stuck in the mud past his wrists as mine once happened to do.

Had we a Swimming Master? Yes, our third master, (I think his name was Roberts) could swim and dive well, and he assisted us all greatly whilst he was with us. We used to learn to swim on bundles of rushes or with two blown bladders on a piece of string. Either of these were awkward in use, especially when they got away from one's breast (as they were very apt to do) and slid towards one's legs. It was not uncommon to rescue a boy, who had the rushes or bladders just above his knees. His legs and feet were then hoisted high into the air, and that most useful portion of his anatomy, his caput, was most assiduously engaged in the vain attempt to drain the river of its superfluous moisture. I need hardly say that the boys rescued in that way never succeeded in affecting the flow of the stream to any appreciable extent; and owing to the fact that they invariably imbibed sufficient "Soup" to last them for some time, they were ever thereafter shy of the rushes and bladders.

Did the Doctor ever go with us to bathe? No, we seldom used to see much of him after school hours. Had we many boys? Yes, very nearly 100. There were at one time, I believe, a much larger number attending the School, but as the Doctor got older the School gradually diminished. Still his reputation as a teacher was good.

It was not altogether a rare thing for a boy to be expelled from the School. Insubordination was bound to be punished, and if thrashing would not do it, there was only one alternative—that the boy should be sent home. I remember one case, however, where the boy was made a public example of—first birched in the lower classroom before the whole School (not caned, but birched), and then, with his jacket turned inside out, expelled from the School. This poor lad was always in hot water; took a thrashing regularly almost every day, and eventually ran away to Bridport to get to sea. He was brought back, received a birching, and was expelled. At the time it made us all terrified, and the lesson of disobedience impressed on our juvenile memories has never been erased; at all events not from mine, and as long as I live I shall never forget that poor boy and his birching.

In spite, however, of Dr. Penny's reputation as a 'beating master,' many of his quondam scholars, through the good grounding and excellent teaching received at his hands, have carved out for themselves names which will live long in the annals of their country. Long is the list, and many are they who owe not a little of their after success in life to the fact that they received such careful tuition and thorough discipline, together with such inculcation of genuine manliness and straightforward conduct, at the hands of Dr. Penny, in Crewkerne School.

Boys! It only remains for me to tell you one thing more. Crewkerne School was founded in the year 1499, and is the tenth oldest School in England. Bearing that always in mind, it is for you, as successors of those who have gone before, so to carry on the banner of this grand old School that its lustre may not be dimmed; that it may still float boldly and gallantly in the breeze, beckoning beneath its ample folds a large army of boys who shall be all that boys ought to be, remembering always the grand old motto of the School, a motto with which it is so intimately associated:—"Venite filii obedite mihi, timorem Domini ego vos docebo."

"OLD BOY."
